ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The tools in this manual are the result of contributions from representatives of many organizations, including member agencies of the RHR Consortium, UNHCR, UNFPA, the Center for Health and Gender Equity, and WHO. The RHR Consortium extends special recognition to Richard Brennan at the International Rescue Committee for his work in initiating the proposal for a tools manual and to Mary Otieno, also at IRC, for providing overall project guidance, particularly on the prevalence survey methodology and questionnaire. Susan Purdin of Columbia University, Sandra Krause of the Women's Commission for Refugee Women and Children, Wilma Doedens from WHO and others produced a working draft of the Situational Analysis tool. Mary Koss of the University of Arizona School for Public Health spearheaded the effort to design the draft prevalence survey questionnaire; Michelle Hynes and Victor Balaban of the Centers of Disease Control and Prevention were also an integral part of the survey questionnaire design and field tests. Beth Vann, Gender-based Violence Technical Advisor for the RHR Consortium, has contributed to many aspects of this manual, in terms of tool design, testing, and feedback. Jeanne Ward, Gender based Violence Research Officer for the RHR Consortium was responsible for compiling and editing this manual.

Thanks also goes to all the field staff around the world who facilitated field-testing of these tools, including the International Rescue Committee in East Timor, Sierra Leone and Guinea, the Women's Wellness Center in Kosovo, CARE Zambia and Eritrea, and UNHCR in Sierra Leone and Geneva. Marrie Glaeberman, Nina Kohli-Laven, Sara Casey and Danka Rapic assisted, respectively, in organizing working groups to design the tools, assimilating and editing the tools, and finalizing the manual. Diana Quick of the Women's Commission for Refugee Women and Children also provided her expert editorial assistance on the final draft of this manual.

The RHR Consortium is also grateful to the U.S. Department of State's Bureau of Population, Refugees, and Migration for their financial support in developing this manual. Their commitment to addressing gender-based violence issues among conflict-affected populations has significantly advanced gender-based violence prevention and response activities in refugee and displaced settings around the world.

INTRODUCTION

Purpose of the Manual

This manual is one of several outcomes of a three-year global Gender-based Violence Initiative spearheaded by the RHR Consortium and aimed at improving international and local capacity to address gender-based violence (GBV) in refugee, internally displaced, and post-conflict settings. The tools have been formulated according to a multi-sectoral model of GBV programming (described more thoroughly on page 35) that promotes action within and coordination between the constituent community, health and social services, and the legal and security sectors. The manual is meant to be used by humanitarian professionals who have experience with and are committed to GBV prevention and response.

The tools are divided into three major categories: assessment, program design, and program monitoring and evaluation. The assessment tools are meant to improve awareness of the nature and scope of GBV in a given setting, to assist in gathering information about local attitudes and behaviors related to GBV, and to identify existing GBV services and gaps in service within the community. The program design tools may be used for designing and implementing projects whose outcomes meet intended goals, and for improving hiring practices within GBV programs. The program monitoring and evaluation tools assist in evaluating program effectiveness, as well as in recognizing short- and long-term service utilization and service delivery trends that may be used to adjust programming.

This manual should be used in complement with other GBV programming resources, accessible on the RHR Consortium website at www.rhrc.org/gbv. Of special note are United Nations High Commission for Refugees' revised guidelines on addressing gender-based violence in refugee settings (publication pending), and the RHR Consortium's Gender-based Violence: Emerging Issues in Programs Serving Displaced Populations (2003).

Background

Since the mid 1990's, the international community has implemented a number of special programs in conflict-affected countries around the world to address violence against women and children. The earliest projects were generally small in scope, focused on survivors of war-related sexual violence, and provided services through vertical or "stand alone" programs that ended when the special funds were spent (usually 12 or 24 months). Within the last several years, efforts have focused on developing comprehensive and long-term services that include health care, emotional support, social reintegration, as well as police and legal intervention. Programs are also developing prevention strategies, including community involvement in raising awareness at the international, national, and local levels.

In 2001, the UNHCR hosted an international conference to explore and document lessons learned and recommended practices for prevention and response to GBV among conflict-affected populations. The conference proceedings describe the recommended approaches for multi-sectoral, inter-agency, community-based action to address survivor needs and reduce further incidents of violence. Initiatives are currently underway in nearly twenty conflict-affected countries to institute the recommendations outlined by UNHCR.

In May 2002, the RHR Consortium published If Not Now, When?: Addressing Gender-based Violence in Refugee, Internally Displaced and Post-Conflict Settings. The findings of this global overview of GBV issues, programs, and gaps in programming suggest that the vast majority of refugee and internally displaced settings have not received adequate support, commitment, or funding to implement the model of multi-sectoral programming advocated by UNHCR. One critical limitation to addressing GBV is the absence of data on the nature and scope of GBV. Even when available, methods for GBV data collection are not sufficiently standardized to allow for comparability within and across cultures. Without sufficient data, programs often depend on anecdotal evidence of GBV crimes to inform the design of prevention and response activities.

The tools in this manual are intended to improve data collection efforts on GBV in humanitarian settings. They are also aimed at supporting and furthering the recommendations of UNHCR and others regarding the necessity for multi-sectoral, inter-agency, and community-based GBV programming. An equally important goal of this manual is to assist field programs in establishing and maintaining strategies for ongoing monitoring and evaluation of program outcomes and goals.

How to Use the Tools

These tools were developed for use by international and local professionals with experience addressing GBV in the communities in which they work. Even so, it is anticipated that those using the tools will represent a range of expertise. For this reason, attempts have been made to make the tools as user-friendly as possible and accessible to a wide audience. The one exception to this user-friendly approach is the draft prevalence survey tool, which is included in this manual for reference and research planning purposes, but should only be used by those with extensive GBV research experience, preferably in consultation with the RHR Consortium.

Every tool within each section of this manual has an introduction that explains the purpose and application of the tool. For each tool, recommendations are provided about the extent to which the tool may be altered or adjusted to meet the needs of the local context. At the end of each section a resource list is provided for further reading relevant to that section.

The assessment section contains situational analysis, focus group, pair wise ranking, mapping and causal flow analysis guidelines, as well as a draft prevalence survey questionnaire and an accompanying sample interviewer training handbook. These assessment tools may be used independently or in conjunction with each other, depending on the needs of the setting. The situational analysis tool is based on a multi-sectoral model of GBV prevention and response, and should be used to guide programming efforts that support existing services and respond to gaps in those services. The focus group guidelines highlight some of the more important issues in conducting qualitative research on GBV, and list specific questions that may be used to investigate local communities' knowledge, attitudes, and behavior related to GBV.

It is important to note that not all assessment tools will be appropriate for all settings. Conducting a methodologically and ethically sound GBV prevalence survey, for example, requires extensive technical and financial resources, and therefore may not be warranted in some situations.

The assessment tools should be adapted to the local situation and informed by a participatory approach. At minimum, the local community should be engaged in reviewing and editing the assessment tools prior to applying them to a local context. The success of any assessment will depend on its relevance to local culture and traditions. However, the extent to which the assessment tools are adjusted to the local context must also be informed by international standards for research on GBV. The prevalence research tool, for example, has been designed not only to provide specific information about a given setting, but also to meet the important goal of cross-cultural comparability of data. Major adjustments to the tool may limit comparability and thus undermine the extent to which research findings improve international understanding of how the nature, scope and impact of GBV manifest differently around the world. For more information on participatory assessment strategies as well as standards for research on GBV, refer to the resource list at the end of the assessment section.

The program design section includes a causal pathway framework with GBV program indicators, as well as some program implementation tools, including hiring guidelines, a standardized Rights and Responsibilities of GBV Program Beneficiaries and Employees, and a sample Code of Conduct for GBV staff. The causal pathway framework offers a method for designing and implementing programs that follows a logical progression towards an intended goal. The indicators are an important component of the causal pathway framework, in that they identify specific outputs and effects of a GBV program which may be used as a guide in monitoring and evaluating program strengths and weaknesses. The remaining program design tools are intended to address an important foundation of all GBV programs: professional hiring practices of staff who are familiar with basic GBV-related issues in their communities, and who understand that working in a GBV program requires committing to the human rights values that GBV programs promote.

The monitoring and evaluation section contains sample output and effect indicators, an incident report form including a consent for release of information, a monthly statistical form, and a client feedback form. These tools have been developed by GBV professionals with extensive experience working in humanitarian settings, and are meant to establish global standards and procedures for GBV data collection within cultures as well as cross-culturally. It is therefore strongly recommended that field professionals use the monitoring and evaluation forms as they are presented in this manual. Revisions and adjustments to the forms will limit standardization and comparability of data collection.

Each tool assumes a common understanding of basic GBV-related concepts, such as definitions of various types of GBV, knowledge of the standards of a multi-sectoral approach to GBV prevention and response, and an understanding of participatory methods of assessment and program design, monitoring and evaluation. The definitions that will be used throughout this manual and which form the theoretical basis for all the tools are outlined below. See the end of this section for additional references addressing general GBV issues and multi-sectoral programming in humanitarian settings.

Note: Professionals working in the field of gender-based violence often have difficulty sharing and comparing information, including data generated from research and from the provision of GBV services, because ideas about how gender-based violence is defined are inconsistent both within and across cultures. The definitions below are provided in an effort to standardize the way in which gender-based violence is understood within humanitarian settings in order to promote more useful data collection, dialogue, and action.

Gender: Refers to the social differences between men and women that are learned, and though deeply rooted in every culture, are changeable over time, and have wide variations both within and between cultures.

Gender-based Violence: Gender-based violence is an umbrella term for any harm that is perpetrated against a person's will, and that results from power inequities that are based on gender roles. Around the world, gender-based violence almost always has a greater negative impact on women and girls. For this reason the term 'gender-based violence' is often used interchangeably with the term 'violence against women.' One reason the term 'gender-based violence' is often considered preferable to other terms that describe violence against women is that it highlights the relationship between women's subordinate status in society and their increased vulnerability to violence. However, it is important to remember that in some cases men and boys may also be victims of gender-based violence. Violence may be physical, sexual, psychological, economic, or socio-cultural. Categories of perpetrators may include family members, community members, and/or those acting on behalf of cultural, religious or state institutions.

Violent Episode: An act or series of acts of violence or abuse by one perpetrator or group of perpetrators. May involve multiple types of violence (physical, sexual, emotional, economic, socio-cultural); and may involve repetition of violence over a period of minutes, hours, or days.

Survivor: Person who has experienced violence or other abuse.

Secondary Survivor: Person impacted by the experience of gender-based violence inflicted upon the survivor. May include family members or others close to the survivor.

Perpetrator: Person, group, or institution that directly inflicts or otherwise supports violence or other abuse inflicted on another against her/his will.

Intimate Partner: Includes current or former spouses (legal and common law), non-marital partners (boyfriend, girlfriend, same-sex partner, dating partner). Intimate partners may or may not be cohabitating and the relationship need not involve sexual activities.

Minor: Person under the age of 18 (according to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child).

Note: When collecting data on gender-based violence, you must analyze whether the act was committed due to gender or sex-based power inequities between the perpetrator and victim, or for other reasons related to the victim's socially-ascribed gender roles and/or sex. Acts that are not based on gender- or sex-based subordination fall outside the realm of gender-based violence and should not be categorized as such. Given that most women and girls around the world suffer gender discrimination, the vast majority of acts of violence against them are gender-based. Acts of violence against men and between men, however, are more selectively representative of gender-based violence. For example, while a man killing another man in war may not represent gender-based violence, a boy forcibly recruited into the armed forces based on the expectation that males fight wars is an example of gender-based violence.

Rape/Attempted Rape

An act of non-consenting sexual intercourse (penis-vagina or penis-anus). Any penetration is considered rape; efforts to rape someone which do not result in penetration are considered attempted rape. Consent by a minor must be evaluated against international standards in which those under the age of 18 are legally considered unable to provide informed consent. Rape/attempted rape may include:

- rape of an adult female;
- rape of a minor (male or female), including incest;
- gang rape, if there is more than one assailant;
- marital rape, between husband and wife; or
- male rape, sometimes known as sodomy.

Sexual Abuse

Other non-consenting sexual acts, not including rape or attempted rape. Sexual abuse includes acts performed on a minor. As above, even if the child has given consent, sexual activity with a minor may indicate sexual abuse because she/he is considered unable to give informed consent. Examples of sexual abuse are:

- insertion of foreign objects into the genitals;
- forced removal of clothing;
- forcing someone to engage in sexual acts; or
- forcing someone to watch sexual acts.

Sexual Exploitation

Sexual exploitation includes sexual coercion and manipulation by a person in a position of power who uses that power to engage in sexual acts with a person who does not have power. The exploitation may involve the provision of assistance in exchange for sexual acts. In these situations, the survivor may believe that she/he has no other option than to comply (perhaps to protect her family, to receive goods or services, etc.), so that even if consent is given, it is manipulated or coerced. Examples include:

- humanitarian worker requiring sex in exchange for material assistance, favors, or privileges;
- teacher requiring sex in exchange for passing grade or admission to class;
- refugee leader requiring sex in exchange for favors or privileges; or
- soldier or security worker requiring sex in exchange for safe passage.

Forced Early Marriage

This occurs when parents or others arrange for and force a minor to marry someone. Force may occur by exerting pressure or by ordering a minor to get married, and may be for dowry-related or other reasons. Forced marriage is a form of GBV because the minor is not allowed to, or is not old enough to make an informed choice.

¹ The definitions provided in this manual are primarily informed by the work of the Reproductive Health for Refugees Consortium, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and the World Health Organization.

Domestic Violence: Intimate Partner or Other Family Members

Domestic violence takes place between intimate partners (spouses, boyfriend/girlfriend) as well as between family members (for example, mothers-in-law and daughters-in-law). Domestic violence may include sexual, physical, and psychological abuse. In any reference to domestic violence, it is important to be clear whether the violence is perpetrated by an intimate partner or another family member. Other terms used to refer to domestic violence perpetrated by an intimate partner include 'spousal abuse' and 'wife battering.'

- Examples include:
- Slapping, hitting, beating, kicking, use of weapons;
 - Verbal and emotional abuse, including public humiliation, forced isolation;
 - Murder or threats to life;
 - Spouse's control and deprivation of his/her partner's access to food, water, shelter, clothing, health care, fertility (forced pregnancies and/or abortions);
 - Wife is beaten or abused for not performing her duties according to husband's expectations (refuses sex, food is late to be prepared, etc.); or
 - A woman is beaten by her mother-in-law because of the woman's subordinate status in the household.

Trafficking for Sex or Labor

Trafficking, as defined by the International Organization of Migration (IOM), occurs when "a migrant is illicitly engaged (recruited, kidnapped, sold, etc.) and/or moved either within or across borders...Intermediaries (traffickers) during any part of this process obtain economic or other profit by means of deception, coercion and or other forms of exploitation under conditions that violate fundamental human rights of migrants."² Women and girls are at primary risk of trafficking, in the form of trafficking for domestic work, forced prostitution, forced marriage, etc.

Female Genital Cutting (FGC)

FGC entails cutting of healthy female genital tissue, usually as part of a traditional ceremony that symbolizes rite of passage for the victim. Adult women and girls may consent to FGC due to social and cultural pressure, or may be physically forced. Minors are often physically forced; even if not, they are considered unable to give informed consent due to their age. FGC is also referred to as Female "Circumcision" and Female Genital Mutilation.

Other Gender-based Violence

- This includes physical, mental or social abuse that is directed against a person because of his or her gender role in a society or culture. Examples include:
- A girl is not allowed to go to school because of gender role expectations in the family (housekeeping, cooking, care of children, etc.);
 - A girl or woman is required to marry against her will according to local custom; or
 - A woman or girl is prevented from freely walking around in her own community because of cultural practices that require women to be accompanied by a male when in public.

Purpose of the Tools

The assessment tools included in this section are intended to help you efficiently and effectively gather information about community attitudes, capacities, and practices related to GBV, including obstacles to addressing GBV in your setting. All of the tools should be applied according to participatory methods, essential for building community involvement and engagement from the beginning of your intervention.

When trying to understand behaviors related to a particular situation or setting, it is important to remember that people's perceptions and attitudes about GBV are often variable and subject to change over time. The first assessment, or baseline assessment, is critical to designing and implementing GBV programming. Baseline assessments are typically conducted quickly (hence, the term "rapid assessment") in order to respond to a specific research need. Very often baseline assessments have the added value of introducing issues related to GBV prevention and response into communities where such issues were formerly unrecognized, and as such can be a community education as well as an information gathering strategy. Subsequent periodic assessments using the same tools and methodology allow you to monitor changes in your environment and adjust programming accordingly.

As is the case in all research, but is perhaps even more critical when addressing sensitive or stigmatized topics such as GBV, the more trusting the relationship between researchers and assessment participants, the more likely individuals and groups will feel comfortable giving accurate information during assessment interviews. Thus, any assessment efforts must prioritize techniques that engender community and individual trust.

Tools Included in this Chapter

- Situational Analysis Guidelines
- Focus Group Guidelines
- Mapping Guidelines
- Pair-Wise Ranking Guidelines
- Causal Flow Analysis Guidelines
- Draft Prevalence Survey Questionnaire
- Sample Interviewer Training Handbook

Description of the Tools

The Situational Analysis Guidelines will allow you to collect and analyze complicated and diverse data in order to develop effective action plans. The tool organizes broad categories of data and information about your target community in a way that enables a systematic investigation of GBV issues and programming in your setting.

Focus groups are particularly helpful in the early stages of program development because they allow the moderator to obtain in-depth information about participants' and communities' knowledge, attitudes, and behaviors related to GBV. In so far as they can be conducted with relatively limited technical and financial resources, focus groups are also a cost-effective and efficient method of GBV research. Focus groups raise awareness and spark dialogue about GBV, and thus are a valuable component of participatory planning and programming.

The Mapping Guidelines are designed to enable your community to participate in identifying its own needs. Community members identify geographic, demographic, historic, cultural, economic and other factors within their communities that may exacerbate GBV.

The Pair-Wise Ranking Guidelines allow community members to collectively determine their most significant GBV-related problems or issues through a systematic listing and graphing exercise. By obtaining information about how communities rank GBV problems, programs are better equipped to prioritize prevention and response strategies.

The Causal Flow Analysis Guidelines allow investigators to delve more deeply into an issue with the assistance of community members. It provides a framework for looking at the causes and effects of GBV, and a method of diagramming the problems for a visual inspection.

The Draft Prevalence Survey Questionnaire is designed for collecting data on the prevalence of GBV in your community. Research initiatives have illustrated that good quality prevalence data are essential to fully assess the nature and scope of GBV, to design appropriate interventions, and to advocate for improved policies to protect survivors and to reduce rates of GBV. However, conducting a methodologically and ethically sound GBV prevalence survey requires extensive technical and financial resources, and therefore may not be warranted in some situations. This tool is included for reference and research planning purposes, and should only be used by those with extensive GBV research experience, preferably in consultation with the RHR Consortium.

The Interviewer Training Handbook provides an example of some of the major areas of concern in preparing for population-based research, as well as an explication of and rationale for the survey questions.

Introduction

The situational analysis guidelines contained in this manual rely on a combination of research methods that include semi-structured interviews, content review of existing data related to GBV cases, and observation of the target environment. The purpose of a situational analysis is to determine the policies, attitudes and practices of key institutions and institutional actors within the security, judicial, legal and psychosocial sectors of the target community. Questions are geared towards assessing the nature and quality of current services for survivors of violence, as well as identifying resources that may be used in GBV prevention activities.

The data generated from a situational analysis can be used to convince community leaders of the need for GBV programming. In addition, the process of conducting a situational analysis can itself be an intervention, by initiating a public discussion of violence and opening dialogue with key institutional actors. The situational analysis should be used as a tool to instruct as much as it is a tool to investigate. For this reason, it is strongly suggested that those using the tool are members of the local community, with a long-term and vested interest in using the knowledge gained from the situational analysis to improve GBV programming. Local researchers should not only participate in (and, wherever possible, lead) the research process, but should also be actively engaged in reviewing the results and developing action plans.

The Situational Analysis is divided into six sections. Moving from general population information to more specific GBV-related issues, each section will enable you to conduct an overall investigation of your community. An incomplete situational analysis can lead to misinterpretations of the GBV situation in your setting and may result in an incorrect or inappropriate allocation of resources. For this reason, please pay attention to each section of the Situational Analysis, make sure you understand precisely what information is being elicited, and try to fill out as much of each section as possible. At the end of select sections there are suggestions of how to interpret the information you have collected and ideas about how you may want to develop certain aspects of your program accordingly.

Section 1. General Demographic Information

Section 2. Overview of Population Movement

This section is specifically for communities in which there are refugee or internally displaced populations, or where there is significant population movement that affects the provision of services to your target community. If your setting does not meet these qualifications, move to section 3. The purpose of this section is to assess how temporary or permanent the population is, what factors effect their ability to remain in one place, and the risks to personal safety during movements. This information will help you to get a sense of whether to engage in long-term or short-term types of programming and projects. For example, situations where there are new arrivals, or frequent influxes, may require more attention to war-related sexual violence and protection in new arrival temporary housing facilities. Conversely, situations that are long-standing, focusing more on care and maintenance than emergency, may require more attention to domestic violence and harmful traditional practices. With this information you can target specific members of the community and specific community behaviors and issues in your program and determine a suitable duration for your various programs and projects.

When did the refugee/IDP population first arrive in this location?

Year	Size of Population (first influx)	Place of Origin	Ethnicity

Describe major population movements in the past 5 years beginning with the most recent:

Year	Size of Population	Influx / Egress	Origin / Ethnicity

Describe any anticipated population increase or decrease:

Circle the number that best describes the majority of population movements in this setting and provide more description in the line below:

- 1) Little routine movement of significant portion of population; restricted movement.
- 2) Frequent movement of population for trade, farming, collecting water, firewood, wild foods, military maneuvers.
- 3) Fluid, virtually unrestricted population movement

International and Local Non-governmental Organizations (NGOs) Working in Camp/Community

This chart is meant to provide information about general NGO activities in your community, not just those related to women's issues or GBV. However, the "Comments" block should be used to identify activities that could be linked to GBV programming or share common concerns and issues with GBV programs; for example, if an NGO conducts activities related to reproductive health, you should note this. Other activities that are linked to GBV might include, but are not limited to: provision of sanitary supplies, HIV/AIDS services, youth and children's programming, human rights documentation, education projects, and community animation. The second component of the identifying information asks about whether the organizations have any written mandates for the provision of specific GBV services within their larger organizational mandate (for example, whether a reproductive health program provides post-rape services or a youth program provides awareness-raising about GBV issues); whether there are any methods for accountability regarding the provision of those specific GBV services; whether staff are required to abide by a code of conduct that condemns any behavior that contributes to GBV (such as sexual exploitation of beneficiaries); and whether funding or training exists for GBV-related activities.

Analyzing the data from Section 3.

If there are large and extensive networks of community-based groups in your target community, you may want to incorporate them into GBV programming, for example, by coordinating outreach and education workshops using their networks and leaders. If there are few community-based groups, you may want to consider whether encouraging the growth of such groups, including women's organizations and youth clubs, might be a useful outreach strategy for your GBV program. Analyze the data you have recorded about NGOs and international organizations with the same questions in mind: What is lacking here that a GBV program can address? What resources are present that a GBV program can use to become more effective? There may be very few organizations working on GBV or GBV related issues, suggesting that in order to forge relationships with other organizations and gain access to their resources and knowledge, you may have to think creatively. Alternatively, there may be numerous organizations working on GBV and GBV-related issues, in which case it is essential that you coordinate with them to ensure that you do not overlap.

Total GBV Reports by TYPE of GBV (Please refer to the definitions section of this manual for instructions on how to categorize different types of GBV.)

This chart is simply another way of recording the same data identified in the previous section, but allows you to breakdown reports according to type of incident. The total numbers arrived at here may include duplicates (ie. a survivor may have reported the same incident to both the police and to a health center). For this reason, these numbers should not be relied upon to represent total numbers of cases. These numbers will be useful in that they will provide a comprehensive picture of the types of GBV reported. You may limit the time period to the last year, or, if you have sufficient data, you may go back several years. However, be sure that your breakdown is in terms of an entire year because identifying total numbers for only a portion of a year will not allow you to compare data from that portion of a year to other years in which you have data from the entire year.

Analyzing the data from Section 4.

When reviewing your data, you will want to try to identify trends in the numbers and types of GBV incidents that are occurring, so that you can target GBV advocacy, service delivery, and community education. You may also wish to analyze what sectors receive the most reports in order to develop hypotheses about why some sectors are more active in GBV than others. You will also want to identify gaps in the data, and, along with information obtained from the rest of the situational analysis, develop hypotheses about the reasons for those gaps. Are there certain types of GBV that are not reported? If so, is this because of low rates of this type of GBV or because there are no services that support reporting? These hypotheses can guide further research. (You may wish, for example, to use focus group discussions with the general population or with key institutional actors to investigate some of the hypotheses you have developed while conducting your situational analysis.)

Section 5. National Security and Legal Authority

This section provides a framework for soliciting information on rules and methods governing official responses to GBV by the police, courts and other institutions under whose jurisdiction your target community falls. Understanding the way GBV is addressed at the legislative, judicial, and police levels will enable you to devise GBV interventions and programming that strengthen and support GBV-related protection policies and programs.

The information requested in this section can be obtained in any of the ways listed below. You should not enter rumors, third-hand stories, or information from other sources unless circumstances absolutely prevent you from having access to the people listed below. Unreliable information about GBV is common, even from widely respected NGOs, universities, and international organizations. Try to collect information directly from the police, courts, or organizations that specifically deal with legal issues and GBV whenever possible.

Data Collection Methods

1. Interview the following:
Judge
National GBV Advocacy NGO
Local Attorney, preferably providing GBV consultation
Police Commander/Chief or Head of GBV Unit

AND

2. Visit, Tour, and Observe the following:
Police Station
Court, Chambers, Offices
Jail
Official Vehicles

I. Laws

Obtain the following information on legal definitions (A-D) from an interview with at least one of the officials listed in the chart above. It is best to identify more than one person listed in the chart so that you can verify your information.

A. Legal Definitions

Type of Offense	Description of Legal Definition and/or Legal Statutes or Policies Governing the Type of GBV	Statute of Limitations for this Crime
Rape/Attempted Rape
'Defilement' or Statutory Rape (rape of minor)
Marital Rape
Other Forms of Sexual Violence (i.e. Sexual Exploitation)
Domestic Violence (Intimate Partner Abuse, including Economic, Emotional, etc..)
Forced Marriage
Trafficking for Sex or Labor
Other Forms of GBV (i.e. Female Genital Cutting)

B. Other Legal Protections and Stipulations

What is the age of "majority" or the age children are legally deemed adults? Is the age the same for males and females?

What are the legal procedures and consequences for the abandonment of newborns/ infanticide? Are they the same for boy babies and girl babies?

What are legal stipulations regarding the following:

Age and conditions of marital consent for males and for females?

Women's property ownership rights?

Inheritance rights of women, girls, and widows?

Divorce, child custody and child support rules and conditions?

C. Emergency Contraception and Abortion

Is emergency contraception legal? Yes ___ No ___
If so, under what circumstances (i.e. only in cases of rape, etc.)? Note any types of evidence or documentation required to qualify for emergency contraception.

Is abortion legal? Yes ___ No ___
If so, under what circumstances (i.e. only in cases of rape, etc.)? Note any types of evidence or documentation required to qualify for a legal abortion.

Who covers the cost of emergency contraception? (health care provider, pregnant woman, etc.)

Who covers the cost of an abortion? (health care provider, the pregnant woman, etc.)

D. Mandatory Reporting Laws

Who, if anyone, is required by law to report incidents of GBV to police authorities?

What types of GBV fall under the mandatory reporting laws?

What are the penalties for non-reporting?

Are there special circumstances for which reporting is not mandatory?

II. Police Procedures

Obtain the following information by interviewing the local Police Commander/Chief or, if existent, the police officer who runs the GBV Unit.

A. Police Procedures and Practice

What types of cases related to GBV have you seen here at this police post or court? (You may have already gotten this information from the data collected in the previous section of the situational analysis.)

What happened to those cases? Are there some situations the police are more likely to investigate or follow-up than others? (Probe for the reasons that may contribute to limited follow-up, such as a woman who "drops the charges" against her husband for domestic violence and the investigation is therefore dropped; or police perceptions that claims of rape are a cover for a woman's promiscuity and therefore not worthy of investigation, etc.)

From what individuals or organizations do police typically receive or allow reports? (Victims? Family members of victims? Health professionals? NGOs? Others?)

Medical Documentation Required to Make a Police Report: (Describe)

Standard Form
Medical Exam Findings
Forensic Evidence
Signature or Authorization of Doctor
Additional Signatures or Authorizations
Other documentation:

B. Investigation and Arrest

What is the process for detaining suspects?

What are conditions like for detained suspects (food, treatment, water, sanitation etc.)?

Whose role is it to write the charges being made and forward the case for prosecution (i.e. police, magistrate, prosecutor)?

What measures exist to ensure the protection of the survivor and of witnesses during the arrest and detention of suspects?

III. Judicial Procedures

Obtain the following information by interviewing a local judge or magistrate.

A. Criminal Legal Proceedings

Who is responsible for pressing charges in criminal proceedings?

Is witness corroboration required in the prosecution of GBV crimes? Yes ____ No ____

What is/are the requisite standard(s) of proof?

What is the typical time frame for prosecution from date of charges filed to date of acquittal or conviction?

Is a specific time frame required by statute, and if so, what is it?

What are reasons for delays in the prosecution of cases?

Can court proceedings occur en camera (in private) for GBV cases (i.e. the presiding judge clears the courtroom or hears the testimony in chambers) for GBV cases? Who decides?

B. Transport, Care & Protection of Witnesses

You may wish to interview a representative of a GBV-related NGOs for more information about witness care if the police or judiciary do not have provisions for care.

What are the standard procedures for transport, care and protection of witnesses?

Are there any relevant legal provisions?

What is the capacity (vehicles, fuel, staff, etc.) or limitations in instituting procedures for witness transport, care and protection?

What role does UNHCR take if witnesses are refugees? To what degree does UNHCR coordinate with police and courts on these cases?

Are there other organizations involved in witness assistance?

What, if any, special provisions are there for minors if they are:

1. Victims?

2. Witnesses?

3. Accused?

C. Sentencing

Are there standard sentencing procedures for different types of GBV crimes?

If a person is convicted of multiple GBV crimes, are sentences concurrent or consecutive?

Are there any provisions for repeat GBV offenders?

How much discretion does the judge have during the sentencing process?

Based on evidence from prior GBV cases, how likely is it that the sentence will be carried out?

Do alternatives to prison sentences exist for GBV offenders (e.g. parole)?

D. Capacity of the Court

What kinds of qualifications, experience, and training in GBV do the judge/magistrate, clerks, and other staff have?

Are copies of GBV-related statutes and laws available and up-to-date?

Does the court conduct training and continuing education for court staff?

How equipped is the court and in what condition is this equipment (typewriters, computers, offices, papers, pens, files, vehicles, fuel, staff)?

E. Civil Proceedings

What are the options for civil proceedings?

What are normal procedures in civil proceedings?

Analyzing the data from Section 5.

With the information you collect here, you will be able to identify potential problems with current legal and police procedures and develop training and other programming that attempts to address those problems. You will also be able to identify positive aspects of police and court procedures that you may use as models, and to which you may refer survivors. You will also develop contacts within the judicial and security sectors who are committed to issues of GBV and may be on-going resources for your program.

Section 6. Assessment of Existing Multi-Sectoral Prevention & Response

This section contains a series of charts that will allow you to identify the mechanisms that exist and do not exist in your setting to address GBV. This is intended to give you a specific, detailed tabulation of the strengths and weaknesses of GBV programming in your setting so that you can devise and improve your program in a way that complements and/or improves existing activities.

The assessment questions are based on the model of multi-sectoral programming. To date, the multi-sectoral model forms the “best practice” for prevention of and response to GBV in refugee, IDP and post-conflict settings. The underlying principle of the multi-sectoral model recognizes the rights and needs of survivors as preeminent; in terms of access to respectful and supportive services, guarantees of confidentiality and safety, and the ability to determine a course of action for addressing the GBV incident. Key characteristics of the multi-sectoral model include the full engagement of the refugee community, interdisciplinary and inter-organizational cooperation, and collaboration and coordination among health, psychosocial, legal, and security sectors.

Each of these sectors is charged under the multi-sectoral model with basic responsibilities related to the prevention of and response to GBV. The health sector, for example, should be able to: actively screen clients for GBV in a way that is respectful and supportive; ensure same sex interviewers for survivors; respond to the immediate health and psychological needs of the survivor and, wherever possible, provide those services free of cost. Health care providers should also be prepared to collect forensic evidence when authorized by the survivor and provide testimony in cases where a survivor chooses to pursue legal action.

The psychosocial sector should be able to: provide supportive and on-going psychological assistance, in which social workers and community services workers have access to professional supervision and support; confidentially collect, document, and analyze client care data, and adjust programming accordingly; offer safe haven for victims who choose to leave an unsafe environment; provide hotlines—in settings where phones exist—to facilitate support and referral; offer income generation and training programs that allow women and girls sustained economic viability; conduct broad-based community education on the prevention of GBV and on the availability of services; and provide early childhood and adolescent education about safe touch, gender, and healthy relationship.

The legal sector should work to: review and revise laws that reinforce GBV and gender discrimination; provide free or low-cost legal counseling and representation to survivors; conduct ongoing training to members of the judiciary to apply GBV laws and carry out judicial proceedings privately, respectfully, and safely; institute provisions for monitoring court processes and collecting and analyzing data on cases; and conduct broad-based community education on the existence and content of anti-GBV laws.

The security sector should have systems in place that reinforce a zero tolerance policy for all police, military, and peacekeeping staff who contribute to or commit acts of GBV, and that policy should be actively enforced by those in command. The security sector should be trained and prepared to intervene in cases of GBV in a way that acknowledges the severity of GBV and does not further victimize the survivor by: designating private meeting rooms with police stations; providing same sex police officers to work with survivors; creating specialized units to address various manifestations of GBV, such as sexual violence, domestic violence, and trafficking; offering survivors referrals for collateral assistance; conducting community policing and education programs; instituting ongoing training and supervision of police personnel; and standardizing sex-disaggregated data collection and analysis.

A critical responsibility of all the sectors is coordination. Coordination includes strategic planning, gathering data and managing information, mobilizing resources and ensuring accountability, orchestrating a division of labor, negotiating and maintaining a serviceable framework of action, and providing leadership. Coordination also includes: sharing information about GBV incident data; discussion and problem-solving among actors about prevention and response activities; and collaborative monitoring, evaluation, and ongoing program planning and development. As part of coordination, methods should exist for reporting and referrals among and between sectors, and those methods should be continuously monitored and reviewed. Referral networks should focus on providing prompt, confidential, and appropriate services to survivors. And, perhaps most importantly, regular meetings should be convened involving representatives of the various sectors tasked with GBV responsibilities. A designated “lead agency”—which ideally would be a ministry or other national body but could also be an international institution or organization, or a local NGO or representative body invested with due authority—would be responsible for encouraging participation and facilitating meetings and other methods for coordination and information. The charts below have been designed according to the responsibilities and activities outlined above. It is important to remember that these responsibilities and activities are not exhaustive and will vary in terms of priority for each setting. Some of the questions below are specific to refugee and internally displaced settings, and some responsibilities outlined below may not be possible, for example, in the emergency stage of humanitarian response. Even so, the general topic areas provide a guide for identifying existing protocols, activities, programming and their gaps. The charts are divided into the four primary sectors involved in addressing GBV: health, psychosocial, legal, and security. Within each sector, responsibilities are categorized according to administration, prevention and response. Administrative responsibilities are those that are more organizational than activity-specific.

In order to complete the charts below, you will need to identify and interview representatives from each of the target areas. Within the health sector, you may wish to interview health facility administrators, doctors, nurses, midwives, traditional birth attendants, perhaps even health ministry staff. In the psychosocial sector, you may wish to interview social workers and other counselors who may be providing psychological and case management assistance to survivors, teachers, and school administrators. Members of the legal sector might include judges and other officers of the court, legislators, lawyers, representatives of legal advocacy groups, and members of the ministry concerned with justice. The security sector interviews would target police, peacekeeping forces, international and national military, and representatives of the ministry tasked with national security. For the coordination questions, you would seek out the person(s) specifically tasked with addressing GBV (for example, at the national level, a minister of women's affairs, or, within a camp setting, a UNHCR protection officer or gender advisor). If no such person exists, which is often the case, you will want to approach an agency that has taken the lead in promoting GBV prevention and response to investigate what coordination activities are underway. If the persons/agencies you identify are international, be sure to investigate to what extent the capacities of local persons/agencies are being supported as a component of creating sustainable GBV programming.

You may use these charts as a way to guide your questions during the interviews, or you may choose to devise questions in advance that address the issues within the charts and then complete the charts based on your notes from the interviews.

GBV COORDINATION – ADMINISTRATIVE (THESE REFER TO GBV-SPECIFIC COORDINATION ACTIVITIES)

In place?		Activity	Comment
Yes	No
		GBV Coordinator for setting (If an international representative, is there also a local/refugee counterpart?)
		GBV lead agency for setting
		GBV focal point for each sector (local/refugee counterparts for each focal point?)
		GBV focal point for each agency operating in setting (local/refugee counterparts for each focal point?)
		GBV focal point for local government/camp council
		Multi-sectoral and inter-agency procedures, protocols, practices, and reporting forms established in writing and agreed upon by all sectors/agencies/persons engaged in providing GBV-related services
		Directory of organizations providing GBV-related services (maintained and up-to-date?)
		Written procedures distributed to organizations for multi-sectoral referral and coordination
		Inter-sectoral coordination meetings held monthly and led by GBV coordinator or lead GBV agency for setting and attended by GBV focal points
		Factors contributing to GBV identified in coordination meetings (through trend analysis of GBV reports)
		Inter-sectoral strategies to address contributing factors developed and regularly reviewed and monitored
		Protocol established and adopted by all sectors of client flow and referrals through sectors
		Standard documentation of GBV incidents and standard flow of documentation inter/intra-agency
		Use of GBV incident report information for coordination of prevention and response activities
		Ethical and safety standards in place for all sectors and for coordination (e.g. privacy and interagency, inter-sectoral confidentiality)
		Community/refugee/local and national government participation in GBV assessment, program planning and coordination
		Periodic (biannual) coordination training to ensure that participating sectors participate in coordination and understand protocols for coordination

GBV COORDINATION – PREVENTION (THESE REFER TO GENERAL ACTIVITIES THAT IMPROVE COMMUNITY AND NGO SENSITIVITY TO ISSUES OF GENDER AND GBV)
In place?	Activity		Comment
	Yes	No
		Setting-wide (all agencies, all sectors) zero tolerance policy for relief/humanitarian workers who abuse their power with codes of conduct and reporting mechanisms in place
		Regular review of setting/camp layout, housing allocations, food/non-food distributions etc. with a view to increasing access and security of women and reducing risk of GBV
		Monthly multi-sectoral, multi-agency meetings attended by all relevant agencies with appropriate refugee/local/government representation and facilitated by GBV Coordinator or lead agency. Meeting notes distributed. (As distinguished by meetings for focal points above, these meetings are open to a general audience and are meant to facilitate communication with non-GBV programs and agencies.)
		Community meetings on GBV issues regularly held for purposes of information-gathering and education
		On-going advocacy to ensure protection activities are occurring in all sectors
		On-going advocacy to ensure gender-analysis completed before policies/programs are designed and implemented
		Beneficiaries involved in all aspects of assessment, and planning and implementing programs
		In refugee/IDP settings, host community engaged in programming for refugees/IDPs

PSYCHOSOCIAL SECTOR – ADMINISTRATION (THIS REFERS TO THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF EACH PSYCHOSOCIAL AGENCY AS WELL AS TO THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE PSYCHOSOCIAL GBV FOCAL POINTS AND INSTITUTIONS/KEY ACTORS OVERSEEING THE DESIGN AND DELIVERY OF PSYCHOSOCIAL SERVICES)
In place?	Activity		Comment
	Yes	No
		Policy/mandate/protocol for gender-balanced hiring in all psychosocial programs including for positions of authority and decision-making Policy/mandate/protocols for the provision of counseling, advocacy and referral for survivors of GBV addressing: *sexual assault *harassment *physical assault *domestic violence *survivor of child sex abuse *state violence *other forms of GBV (e.g., FGC, forced marriage, kidnapping, prostitution, etc.
		Psychosocial programs have and maintain directory of organizations providing GBV and collateral services
		Policy/mandate/protocol for coordination among psychosocial programs
		Policy/mandate/protocol for information, education and communication (IEC) related to human rights and GBV
		Policy/mandate/protocol for women's empowerment programming
		Policy/mandate/protocol for male involvement programming
		Policy/mandate/protocol for survivor response including intake, counseling, safety planning and secondary trauma/stress
		Policy/mandate/protocol for the care and safety of counselors and other service providers
		Policy/mandate/protocol for record keeping that ensures safety and confidentiality of survivor

GBV COORDINATION – RESPONSE (THESE REFER TO THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE GBV COORDINATOR/LEAD AGENCY/SECTOR FOCAL POINTS TO ENSURE APPROPRIATE GBV SERVICES TO SURVIVORS)
In place?	Activity		Comment
	Yes	No
		Ensure appropriate psychosocial services by conducting advocacy, program development, training, etc.
		Ensure appropriate health services by conducting advocacy, program development, training, etc.
		Ensure responsive security system by conducting advocacy, program development, training, etc.
		Ensure appropriate protection actions by conducting advocacy, program development, training, etc.
		Assure confidentiality within sectors and across sectors
		Coordinate solutions for survivor safety needs as appropriate (ration card, housing, non-food items)
		Maintain, analyze, and report data generated from service delivery and from other sources. Use data for coordination and program improvement.

PSYCHOSOCIAL – PREVENTION (THESE ACTIVITIES ARE THE RESPONSIBILITY OF ALL PSYCHOSOCIAL PROGRAMS)
In place?	Activity	Comment
	Practice gender-balanced hiring within psychosocial programs	(comment on number of females and males hired)
	Practice gender-equity in positions of authority in psychosocial programs
	Sensitize all psychosocial workers in setting to GBV
	Sensitize international, national, and humanitarian aid workers in setting to issues of GBV
	Provide targeted GBV and human rights training to international, national, and humanitarian workers in setting	(comment on number trained)
	Conduct IEC campaigns to raise awareness of GBV in the setting and promote community action
	Support community engagement in IEC campaigns (e.g., through religious groups, market groups, men's groups, etc.)
	For education-related psychosocial programs, incorporate age-appropriate gender-awareness into formal and informal curriculum
	Support/provide empowerment activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ income generating activities ▪ literacy programs ▪ vocational training ▪ civil society-building
	Support/facilitate peer groups for: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ women ▪ adolescents ▪ men

PSYCHOSOCIAL – RESPONSE (THESE ARE THE RESPONSIBILITIES FOR PROGRAMS PROVIDING GBV-RELATED SERVICES)
In place?	Activity	Comment
	24-hour (on call) services
	In-take/assessment using standard incident report form
	Provide supportive counseling and case management for survivor
	Conduct survivor safety planning
	Provide referrals: maintain and utilize directory of organizations offering GBV-related services
	Advocate for the needs of survivor to family members, other agencies/sectors (i.e. health, legal, police)
	Assist survivor to interact with other sectors as s/he desires by initiating contact, making phone calls, etc.
	If survivor raped or injured, escort to health services
	If survivor requests, escort to police/security services
	If survivor requests, escort to lawyer/legal services
	Facilitate survivor support groups
	Provide on-going supervision to GBV counselors
	Assure care and safety of counselors and other program employees
	Facilitate community action to establish "safe houses" or other methods to ensure survivor safety
	Maintain confidential files
	Compile and analyze monthly incident reports to use for program improvement
	Share data as requested with GBV coordinator/lead GBV agency
	Identify agency focal point to participate in GBV coordination meetings

HEALTH – ADMINISTRATION (THIS REFERS TO THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF EACH HEALTH AGENCY AS WELL AS TO THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE HEALTH GBV FOCAL POINTS AND INSTITUTIONS/KEY ACTORS OVERSEEING THE DESIGN AND DELIVERY OF HEALTH SERVICES)

In place?		Activity	Comment
Yes	No
		Policy/protocol for medical management if GBV that includes: medical history, examination, forensic evidence, treatment (emergency contraception, STD/HIV prevention/treatment) referral (surgeon, OBGYN, psychologist, psychiatrist, other), pregnancy counseling, record keeping that ensures confidentiality and coordination with other sectors and actors
		Policy/protocol for gender-balanced hiring including positions of authority and decision-making
		Protocol for drug supply inventory and maintenance
		Directory of organizations providing GBV and collateral services maintained and up-to-date
		GBV sensitization curriculum for health staff available

HEALTH – PREVENTION (THESE ACTIVITIES ARE THE RESPONSIBILITY OF ALL HEALTH PROGRAMS)

In place?		Activity	Comment
Yes	No
		Gender-balanced hiring practices	(comment on number of females and males)
		Gender equity in positions of authority and decision-making
		All health staff receive GBV sensitization training
		Select staff receive training on medical management of GBV, including ability to screen for GBV
		Provide training in the community related to health impacts of GBV	(comment on number trained)
		Involve men in reproductive health activities

HEALTH – RESPONSE (THESE ARE THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF HEALTH PROGRAMS PROVIDING GBV-RELATED SERVICES, AT MINIMUM AVAILABLE IN ALL HOSPITALS)

In place?		Activity	Comment
Yes	No
		24-hour (on call) services with same-sex medical provider (nurse and/or doctor) trained in GBV response
		In-take/assessment using standard incident report form
		Survivor safety planning
		Take medical history
		Conduct medical exam
		Collect forensic evidence as appropriate
		Provide medical treatment
		Provide referrals using directory of organizations providing GBV and collateral services
		Schedule follow-up visit
		Share information with police, community services, protection as appropriate and authorized by survivor
		Testify in court as appropriate
		Document actions
		Maintain confidential files
		Compile and analyze monthly incident reports to use for program improvement
		Share data as requested with GBV coordinator/lead GBV agency
		Identify agency focal point to participate in GBV coordination meetings

SECURITY / POLICE – ADMINISTRATION (THIS REFERS TO THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF INSTITUTIONS/KEY ACTORS OVERSEEING THE PROTECTION OF THE TARGET POPULATION, INCLUDING POLICE, PEACEKEEPING FORCES, LOCAL MILITARY, AND PRIVATE SECURITY PERSONNEL)
In place?	Activity		Comment
	Yes	No
		Policy/protocol for UNHCR Field Security officer to address GBV (for refugee setting)
		Policy/protocol for national police officers to prevent/respond to GBV
		Policy/protocol for peacekeeping forces to prevent/respond to GBV
		Policy/protocol for local military to prevent/respond to GBV
		Curriculum available for training police, security officers, and community in national laws relevant to GBV
		Curriculum available for interview and investigative procedures for national GBV crimes (per national law), including: -child sexual assault (female and male) -adult sexual assault (female and male) -domestic abuse (partners, parents, children, elderly)
		Police posts with private interview space for GBV cases
		Copies of current statutes on file in police stations/posts
		Orientation and training for all new officers regarding GBV prevention/response
		Protocol for confidential record keeping
		Protocol for coordination with other sectors and actors
		Directory of organizations providing GBV and collateral services maintained and up-to-date in police posts

SECURITY / POLICE – PREVENTION
In place?	Activity		Comment
	Yes	No
		Gender-balanced hiring practices in police, peacekeeping forces	(comment on number of females and males)
		Gender equity in positions of authority and decision-making in police, peacekeeping forces
		Personal codes of conduct enforced for police, peacekeeping forces, local military
		Reporting mechanisms in place for violations in codes of conduct
		Security/police participate in site planning to minimize risks (for refugee/IDP settings)
		Police, peacekeeping forces work with community to identify and solve high-risk situations	(comment on number trained)
		On-going training for police, security officers, and community in national laws relevant to GBV
		Community policing, including patrols in high-risk areas

SECURITY / POLICE – RESPONSE (THESE ARE THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF POLICE AND OTHER SECURITY FORCES TASKED WITH RESPONDING TO GBV REPORTS)
In place?	Activity		Comment
	Yes	No
		24-hour (on call) services with trained same-sex interviewers available
		Assessment using standard incident report form
		Survivor interviewed in private space
		Survivor safety planning
		Collect / store evidence
		Provide referrals using directory of organizations offering GBV and collateral services
		Escort to health services, as appropriate
		Investigate alleged crime
		Arrest perpetrator
		Record all actions including follow-up
		Compile and analyze monthly incident reports
		Share data as requested with GBV coordinator/lead GBV agency
		Identify agency focal point to participate in GBV coordination meetings

LEGAL/JUSTICE – ADMINISTRATIVE
In place?	Activity	Comment
Yes	No
	Policy/protocol for UNHCR Protection Officer to address GBV (for refugee setting)
	Policy/protocol for court system to respond to GBV cases (efficiently, privately, etc.)
	Policy/protocol for GBV evidence collection and storage
	Policy/protocol for GBV survivor protection, assistance, and advocacy through judicial proceedings
	Policy/protocol for court's coordination with other sectors
	Copies of national laws related to GBV made available to all representatives of the court and legal systems
	Guidelines for traditional courts, including refugee tribunals, for types of GBV cases these courts can and cannot judge; sentencing is appropriate for types of crimes and respects/reinforces human rights of survivors
	Curriculum for training judges and lawyers in national laws and practice relevant to GBV

LEGAL/JUSTICE – PREVENTION
In place?	Activity	Comment
Yes	No
	Gender-balanced hiring practices in judicial system	(comment on number of females and males)
	Gender equity in positions of authority and decision-making in judicial system
	Human rights education for the community, police, courts, and humanitarian actors (national and international)	(comment on number of females and males trained)

LEGAL/JUSTICE – RESPONSE
In place?	Activity	Comment
Yes	No
For Lawyers, UNHCR Protection Officers:
	Assessment using standard incident report form
	Safety planning for the survivor
	Provide referrals using directory of organizations providing GBV and collateral services
	Monitor police action for investigation and arrest of perpetrator
	Provide legal advice and information to survivors
	Monitor court proceedings; advocate for survivor as necessary
	Escort survivor and witnesses to court; advocate for protection as necessary
	Provide assistance for survivor and witnesses for appearance in court (meals, transport, overnight accommodation, etc.)
	Ensure perpetrator protection (food, appropriate treatment, etc.) in jail/prison facilities and in community at large
	Ensure on-going survivor protection (safe houses, relocation, etc.)
	Compile and analyze monthly incident reports
	Share data as requested with GBV coordinator/lead GBV agency
	Identify agency focal point to participate in GBV coordination meetings
National and/or Traditional Court:
	Conduct legal proceedings with minimal delays
	Hear survivor and witness testimonies en camera (in private, not in open court)
	Ensure legal advice and advocacy for survivor, witnesses
	Ensure appropriate sentencing, compliant with existing laws and that respect human rights of women/survivors

Introduction

As a method of more in-depth qualitative research, focus groups provide a means to obtaining greater insights into the settings and contexts in which violence occurs, the dynamics of abuse, and how women, children and communities are affected by this violence. Additionally, research on men can provide important insights into the causes of violence, as well as into the most effective strategies for preventing violence.⁴

Focus groups also assist in determining the survival mechanisms that women employ to deal with GBV, both on their own, and with the help of their families and friends, especially those women for whom there is an absence of formal services. Understanding survivors' pathways to recovery can improve clinical interventions and public education campaigns.⁵

In planning focus group discussions, you should consider the overall objectives of the study: do you want to learn about attitudes towards GBV?; or about survivor's coping mechanisms and utilization of GBV-related services?; or about the general nature and scope of GBV in a community? In identifying your objectives, it is critical to seek the advice of local women, particularly regarding cultural appropriateness of topics and methodologies for conducting group discussions. As with all research on GBV, issues of safety and security for both participants and researchers should be paramount when designing your research plan.

Focus group composition

When conducting focus groups on sensitive or taboo topics such as GBV, it is often preferable that participants are relatively similar to one another in terms of age, culture, sex, social class, etc. By attempting to create a more homogeneous profile of participants within each focus group, you may be able to increase group comfort level when discussing sensitive topics. After you have gained sufficient experience in conducting focus groups within your target community, you may wish to design more heterogeneous groups in order to stimulate communication within and among disparate groups.

Whenever you are investigating an issue through focus group discussions, it is important for purposes of representation and comparison to conduct at least two focus groups for each representative population, e.g., women; men; married; unmarried; different ethnic groups; different age cohorts; etc. One rule of thumb in focus group research is to conduct focus groups until they no longer provide any new information. This may occur after only two or three focus groups; sometimes it may take five or six groups before you feel that you have sufficient information on the topic you are investigating. If this is your first time conducting focus groups, you should plan to conduct a few practice groups, and expect that they may not provide the quality of information you need.

Participants may be recruited through local organizations or community leaders. In refugee settings, the local UNHCR and NGO staff can help determine the most feasible way of doing this. However, you must always weigh your strategies for recruiting participants against safety and security issues posed by investigating issues of GBV. If, for example, a woman in an abusive relationship participates in a focus group on domestic violence, she may be at risk if the community-at-large is aware of the topic, and her husband may feel threatened by her participation and further abuse her. It is important that people understand that participation in focus group discussions is completely voluntary, and that they may choose to leave at any time during the discussion. In addition, it is imperative that participants are aware that they will receive no tangible benefit for their participation.

The ideal size for a focus group is eight to ten respondents. In general, the smaller the group, the more manageable it is. Where the purpose is to generate depth of expression from participants, a smaller group size may be preferable. Remember to recruit a few more respondents than you need in case some decide to drop out.

Location

The location where the discussions will be held should be carefully selected. It should be private so that participants may speak without being overheard or seen by others not in the group. Avoid noisy areas where it will be difficult for participants and the moderator to hear each other. In addition, the setting should be comfortable, non-threatening, and easily accessible for the respondents. Seating should be arranged to encourage participation and interaction, preferably in a circle where all respondents can see each other and the moderator.

Conducting the Group Discussion

When the group of respondents is gathered for the discussion, the moderator should give a brief introduction to put everyone at ease. She/he should explain the purpose of the discussion, how the organization plans to use the information collected, and the group rules (speak one at a time, avoid interrupting or monopolizing, etc.). Explain that the discussion is confidential and that participants should respect each other's right to privacy by not discussing what was talked about with people outside of the focus group. Reiterate that all participants must agree to the rule of confidentiality; those who do not agree should be invited to leave the focus group without being stigmatized.

Of special importance, the moderator should inform the participants that she/he will be asking general questions about issues in their community affecting women, men, and families, and she/he is NOT requesting that participants disclose personal information about themselves. In fact, in focus group discussions where confidentiality can not be absolutely ensured, moderators should monitor participants' rates of disclosure and actively discourage participants from self-revelations within the group. If it appears that a participant would like to talk about their own history of GBV, encourage them to speak to a moderator after the focus group has wrapped. The moderator should be sure to have someone available to speak privately with a participant should they become emotionally overwhelmed during the focus group, and should also allot time at the end of the focus group for follow-up with select group members who may require individual attention.

If the discussion is to be tape-recorded, obtain permission from the respondents first, and be sure to inform participants about how the tapes will be kept secured (i.e. in a locked cabinet) until they can be destroyed. Always be sure to bring extra batteries and tapes. Introduce any note-taker, observer, or translator who will remain in the room during the discussion and ensure participants that the rules of confidentiality extend to everyone in the room, including the note-takers, observers, and translators. Explain that no names will be used. Repeat that no benefits will come from participation.

The discussion should last no longer than one and a half to two hours. Remember to allow for extra time if the discussions are to be simultaneously translated. It is strongly recommended that moderators speak the language of the group participants; however, in cases where translation must be provided for the moderator, participants should be forewarned that the discussion process will require that participants speak slowly and wait for translation before moving on to the next participant.

Moderator Characteristics

The moderators, observers and translators for each group discussion should be the same general demographic profile as the participants. All female groups should have female moderators; all male groups should have male moderators. If the group is comprised of both males and females, there should be both a male and a female moderator. In all cases, it may be preferable to have two moderators per group, not only so that the discussion can be monitored more closely than is possible with one moderator, but also so that one moderator will be available to leave the group and provide individual assistance in the event a participant becomes overwhelmed during the group discussion.

The study team should discuss the characteristics of the people they believe will make successful moderators. They should consider:

- minimum education level;
- age (minimum or maximum);
- sex (generally the moderator should be the same sex as the participants);
- language and communication skills in the lingua franca and other local languages;
- ability to feel at ease with people;
- good verbal and interpersonal skills;
- comfort level with discussing sensitive topics;
- good listening skills;
- ability to be non-judgmental and respect the dignity of respondents and confidentiality;
- interest and motivation to work;
- previous experience with focus groups or other research activities.

In situations where an experienced moderator is unavailable, it is important to stress the importance of being non-judgmental, avoiding the temptation to offer opinions, agree, or disagree with commentary from participants. The moderator should not put words into participants' mouths. There are no right or wrong answers in a focus groups discussion. The discussion is a time to listen, and not to inform. The moderator should be as attentive to what is not said as to what is.

The Topic Guide

The topic guide is a list of topics or question areas the moderator should cover in the focus group discussion. The moderator uses the topic guide to direct the discussion and cover all of the relevant topics while allowing the discussion to flow naturally. Questions should be selected because of their relevance to the research objectives while taking into account local knowledge and cultural sensitivities. The sequence of topics generally moves from the general to the specific. This strategy of starting with more general questions is especially important when conducting GBV research, as it helps to ease the participants into the issues.

Once the topic guide is prepared, it must be translated into the local language by a native speaker and then translated back into English by someone else to ensure the accuracy of the translation. The topic guide should be pre-tested with a group of respondents similar to those you will include in your focus groups. In addition, if the moderator is inexperienced, she/he should conduct several focus groups as practice. A good instrument makes the data more useful.

The suggested topic guides outlined below are organized to elicit knowledge, attitudes, and behaviors associated with GBV among the target population. These questions are meant to provide prompts for establishing your own focus group topic guides, and can be reorganized or edited as the research team deems useful. However, when adapting the questions below to your community, bear in mind the general rules that you should move from the more general to the specific, and that you should not ask questions that encourage or require participants to disclose their own histories of GBV within the focus group.

INTRODUCE MODERATORS, TRANSLATORS, RECORD KEEPERS

INTRODUCE TOPIC OF RESEARCH:

I am interested in learning about some of the concerns and needs of people in this community. I'm especially interested in trying to understand some of the issues that women and girls have to deal with here. I hope that your answers to my questions will help improve services for women, girls, and families in this community. I expect our discussion to last about one and a half to two hours.

AGREE ON GROUP NORMS AND CONFIDENTIALITY

FIRST, I WOULD LIKE TO ASK YOU SOME GENERAL QUESTIONS ABOUT YOUR COMMUNITY:

How did men spend time in your country (before conflict)? How do they spend their time now?

How did women spend time in your country (before conflict)? How do they spend their time now? What are their daily chores? What are their social activities? Do you think women are busier now or before? Why?

How did children spend time at home (before conflict)? How do they spend it now? Do they play? Where and with what? Are they in school? To what age? Are they working? At home or for pay?

Who is responsible for making decisions for this community? Who is responsible for making decisions in the family? Who controls the resources in the community? In the family?

What people or groups in this community are involved in helping those most in need?

How do men get information about what is happening in the community?

Who do men go to for help when they have problems?

How do women get information about what is happening in the community?

Who do women go to for help when they have problems?

NOW I'D LIKE TO ASK YOU SOME QUESTIONS ABOUT THE SAFETY AND SECURITY OF WOMEN AND GIRLS:

Are you aware of problems with the safety and security of women and girls in this community? (Ask for examples. If no one speaks specifically about GBV, evaluate the group to decide whether you want to bring up the issue now or wait until the group has developed more comfort talking about these issues.)

What are the circumstances that cause problems of safety and security of women and girls in this community? (Ask for examples.)

What has been done here to improve the safety of women and girls?

What about specific forms of violence against women and girls? What practices are considered sexually inappropriate, abusive or violent in the community? Can you give examples of sexual abuse in your community? (Examine definitions of forced sex/rape, sexual harassment, sexual manipulation, etc.)

When and where does sexual violence occur?

Without mentioning names or indicating anyone specific, who are the perpetrators? What happens to the perpetrators (different consequences if the perpetrator is known/unknown)?

Without mentioning names or indicating anyone specific, which groups of women do you think feel the least safe, or feel at most risk for sexual violence? Which groups of women do you think feel the most safe?

Has the problem of sexual violence gotten worse, better, or stayed the same in the last year? What particular types of sexual violence have gotten worse, better, or stayed the same? If there has been a change, what has caused it?

Without mentioning names or indicating anyone, do you know women who have been forced to have sex with soldiers or armed gangs against their will? If yes, how do you know who they are? What problems do they have? How are they treated by the community?

Without mentioning names or indicating anyone, do you know of women in this community who are forced to have sex when they don't want to? Where do these things happen? How do you know about them? What problems has this caused for these women? How does the community respond to this?

Without mentioning names or indicating anyone, do you know if women in your community are abducted or sold against their will in order to work for people who demand that they perform sexual acts in exchange for money?

Is there ever a situation where a woman might be partially responsible or to blame (or at fault) for her rape/sexual assault? Is it possible that some women ask for sexual assault through their behaviors or attitudes? If a survivor is not crying or is not emotional after a rape, what do you think must have happened?

Do women look for help when they experience sexual violence? Do they tell anyone (family members, other women, health worker, community leader, police/security people/authorities, someone else)?

In your home country, where would women get help if they had been raped? What would the community have done? What services were available for this kind of thing?

How do women cope with violence against their family members or friends?

How do men cope with violence against their daughters, sisters, mothers, wives, friends?

How do families and communities cope with violence against women and girls?

How have people not been able to cope?

What are community responses when violence occurs? What is done to prevent violence? What is done to help survivors? How could these efforts be improved?

Do women's support networks exist to help survivors? What social and legal services exist to help address problems associated with violence (i.e. health, police, legal counseling, social counseling)? Who provides these services? How could these efforts be improved?

THANK YOU FOR YOUR IMPORTANT FEEDBACK. I KNOW THESE ARE DIFFICULT QUESTIONS ABOUT TOPICS PEOPLE DON'T USUALLY TALK ABOUT. I'D LIKE TO PAUSE NOW AND ASK SOME QUESTIONS ABOUT MARRIAGE AND RELATIONSHIPS BETWEEN HUSBANDS AND WIVES:

In normal times in your country, how was a traditional marriage done? Was there or is there a bride price or dowry? If so, what exactly was the practice related to this? Have marriage practices changed since you left your country? If so, how?

At what age do women usually marry? At what age do men usually marry? Do women usually wait until after marriage to have sex? Do men usually wait until after marriage to have sex?

How many children do most couples want to have? If husbands and wives and disagree about the number of children, who has authority?

When women are pregnant in this camp/village, do they usually see a health worker? Do they see a doctor? A nurse? A midwife or traditional birth attendant (TBA)? A traditional healer? What do women do when they are pregnant but they don't want to be?

What are views on education of women, women working and their ability to care for the family? Who makes decisions in the family about these things?

Are there traditional practices that hurt the welfare of women and/or girls?

Do some men have more than one wife? Are all of the wives treated the same way?

What kinds of conflicts occur in marriages and families and what are the reasons (i.e. fidelity in marriage, education/working wife, differences in socioeconomic status of both spouses, interference of in-laws with marital/family conflicts)? How are they resolved?

There are men who treat their wives well and men who don't. What are some things that husbands do if they are treating their wives well? What are some things that might be examples of husbands treating their wives badly?

There are women who treat their husbands well and women who don't. What are some of the things that wives do if they are treating their husbands well? What are some things that might be examples of wives treating their husbands badly?

Do you believe that a wife should never question her husband? Does a husband have the right to physically punish his wife for any reason?

Why would a husband hit his wife? Why would a wife hit her husband?

Without mentioning names or indicating anyone specific, what types of physical and emotional abuse of women by their husbands are you aware of? Why do you think these happen? What do you think are the causes of the abuse?

When a husband insists on sex from his wife, does she have the right to refuse sex? If she does refuse and he forces her to have sex, is that rape?

Why do you think most women who are in violent marriages do not seek any assistance (i.e. reasons such as break-up of family, family honor being affected, etc.)?

FOCUS GROUP TOPIC GUIDE FOR ADOLESCENT/YOUTH

Name of Group Interviewed: _____	Date: _____
Site: _____	Time discussion started: _____ Time ended: _____
Participant summary: No. of girls: _____ No. of boys: _____	Total No. of adolescents: _____
Name(s) of Facilitator(s): _____

Who do you think will be the right person(s) to help women who are in abusive relationship? Without mentioning names or indicating anyone specific, do you know women who have been helped? If so, what type of assistance?

What can be done to prevent abuse and violence within families?

How can and how should this community protect family members from abusing each other? What about NGOs and other community organizations? What about religious institutions and the government?

CLOSING QUESTIONS:

Before we finish, I would like to hear what you think should be done to end violence against women and girls in [...].?

What did you think about the subjects we have discussed? Do you think that this group covered issues that are important to women and girls? Do you think that this group covered issues that are important to men and boys?

CLOSE THE INTERVIEW:

Thank you all for your time and ideas. This has been extremely helpful. As I said in the beginning, the purpose of this discussion was to help me learn about what women want and what women need here. As more services are developed here, we want to be sure they help you address the problems you are facing.

Please remember that you agreed to keep this discussion confidential. Please do not share with others the details of what was said here. People will be curious and you may have to say something--I suggest you tell them that I was asking questions about women and men and health issues, just gathering information – like I'm sure has happened before. Please do not give details of what was said here, so that we can try and preserve confidentiality and the safety of people who are exposed to violence.

How does that sound to you? Do you have questions for me? If anyone would like to speak with me in private, I will stay here after we end.

Thank you for your help.

NOTE:

FOR SPECIAL TYPES OF GROUPS LISTED BELOW, INSERT THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS:

FOR RELIGIOUS LEADERS, ASK:

What do religious doctrines teach on violence towards women, both in terms of preventing violence and sanctioning those that are violent towards women? Is there anything that religious leaders can do to prevent GBV?

FOR DISABLED GROUPS, ASK:

Do the existing services to prevent or help those assaulted address disabled people, recognizing and respecting their special needs?

FOR GROUPS OF WOMEN LEADERS, ASK:

Is there anything women leaders can do to prevent GBV?

INTRODUCE MODERATORS, TRANSLATORS, RECORD KEEPERS

INTRODUCE TOPIC OF RESEARCH:

I am interested in learning about some of the concerns and needs of people in this camp/village. I would like to ask you all some questions about young men and women in your community. I hope that the answers to these questions will help my organization to improve health and other services for youth. I expect our discussion to last about one and a half to two hours.

AGREE ON GROUP NORMS AND CONFIDENTIALITY

FIRST I'D LIKE TO ASK YOU SOME GENERAL QUESTIONS:

What are your favorite ways to spend time?

What are your least favorite ways to spend time?

What kinds of problems do girls have here?

Do you know girls who do not attend school? What are some of the reasons why girls would not go to school, or would stop going?

What kinds of problems do girls who don't go to school have?

What kinds of problems do boys have here?

Do you know boys who do not attend school? What are some of the reasons why boys would not go to school, or would stop going?

What kinds of problems do boys who don't go to school have?

NOW, I WOULD LIKE TO ASK SOME QUESTIONS ABOUT FAMILIES:

At what age do you think you will probably marry? How old will your husband/wife be? Will you have a traditional marriage?

What will happen to you after you get married? Where will you live?

Who will make decisions in your family? Will your marriage be similar to the marriage your parents have, or will it be different? Why?

How did you learn about sex? Do girls usually wait until after marriage to have sex? Do boys usually wait until after marriage to have sex? If a girl is having sex and does not want to become pregnant, what does she do?

Sometimes girls become pregnant when they don't want to be. What do girls do when they are pregnant but don't want to be? Do you know girls who are pregnant and not married? What do their families think of this? What do you think of this?

What kinds of problems do young unmarried mothers have?

Without mentioning names or indicating anyone specific, do you know boys or girls who have gotten sexually transmitted diseases? What kinds of sexually transmitted diseases? Do they see a health worker for treatment? If not, whom do they see?

Do girls use condoms? Do boys use condoms? Do they know how to put them on and how to use them? If you wanted to get a condom, where would you go?

What do your friends think of condoms?

Without mentioning names or indicating anyone specific, do you know girls who have been forced to have sex against their will by their boyfriend or anyone else?

How about with soldiers or with other people? How do you know who they are? What problems do these girls have? How are these girls treated by the community?

What do you think rape is? If a girl was raped here, who would she tell? Who would she go to for help?

How do you think it would be best to help these girls? What do you think would be the best ways to prevent girls from experiencing violence?

What other programs or activities would you like to see in your community?

How would you like to be involved in organizing those activities?

CLOSE THE INTERVIEW:

Thank you all for your time and ideas. This has been extremely helpful.

How does that sound to you? Do you have questions for me? If anyone would like to speak with me in private, I will be here after we end.

Thank you for your help.

Visit the community and ask community members to help you select a public place for a community discussion that is easy to get to and can accommodate as many as 20 people. Let community members know that the discussion will focus on issues related to the safety and security of women and girls in their community. Let them know that you are interested in identifying the geographic areas or physical spaces where women might be vulnerable to harm, including physical or sexual violence. Let them know that you are also interested in identifying resources available to women and girls. Make sure that both men and women are invited to participate in the community mapping assessment. After you have gathered at least 10-20 people at the selected site, follow the outline below to complete your assessment.

1. Introduce the purpose of your visit, assess people's interest and availability. Explain that you are interested in learning about the places and the reasons that the safety and security of women and girls may be compromised in this community.
2. Request that someone draw a map of the community or desired area.
3. Some people will naturally reach for a stick and begin tracing on the ground. Others will look around for paper and pencils. Have materials ready to offer, if it is appropriate.
4. As the map is beginning to take shape, other community members will become involved. Give people plenty of time and space. Do not hurry the process. As the map takes shape, ask people to pinpoint where women and girls are at risk of various types of violence, such as physical violence, sexual violence, sexual harassment, etc.
5. Wait until people are completely finished before you start asking questions. Then review the visual output and ask questions about why people identified various areas as risk areas, what types of violence women and girls are at risk for in these areas, and what the participants believe are the reasons for this risk. Phrase questions as open-end and non-judgmental. Probe often, show interest, let people talk.
6. Ask people to return to the map(s) and record where women and girls can go for assistance in dealing with violence, both in terms of improving protections to prevent violence but also in terms of receiving services after a violence incident.
7. Combine and record any visual output, whether it was drawn on the ground or sketched on various sheets of paper. Be accurate and include identifying information about the author (place, date, participants' names, if possible.)

Close the exercise by thanking all of the participants for their help and letting them know what will be done with the information you have collected.

Sample Questions to assist with the Community Mapping Assessment

- Where are the main areas that women and children feel vulnerable or at risk?
- Are there individuals in the community that are known to be a threat to women or children?
- Are there services available to women that address domestic violence or sexual assault/rape? Where are they?
- Who do community members trust to help them deal with domestic violence or sexual assault/rape?
- Where are the health services located?
- Are mental health services available? Where?
- Are there any women's groups or resource centers in the area?
- Where do people go to address security concerns or issues?
- Are there places in the community that are regarded as safe places for women to go to?

PAIR-WISE RANKING GUIDELINES⁷

Pair-wise ranking allows community members to collectively determine their most significant problems or issues related to GBV. This form of assessment also allows facilitators to get a clear sense of attitudes community members hold about GBV, such as which types of GBV are perceived as most problematic and which are viewed as acceptable or less problematic. Additionally, pair-wise ranking is a powerful tool for helping community members understand the differences in perceptions about GBV that exist among and between women and men in their community. Pair-wise ranking can also be used as a way to help community members engage in discussion about which activities or programs they think should be prioritized for preventing and responding to GBV in their community.

By beginning with listing problems/issues and then comparing them systematically in pairs, a matrix is developed which allows the community members to compare and contrast the issues they have identified. Each item is successively compared against the other items and, for each pair, the most significant problem is chosen. Once the matrix is complete it is possible to score and then rank issues/problems from the most important to the least.

The procedure should be as follows:

1. Once rapport has been established with a group of community members, introduce the pair-wise ranking exercise. First, ask people to list their responses to a specific well-phrased question such as: what are the types of violence or abuse women and girls experience in this community? If people identify multiple forms of violence that can be grouped under the same heading (i.e. a husband calling his wife names, telling her she is stupid, or criticizing her feelings) encourage them to identify a general category that captures these multiple forms of violence or abuse (i.e. emotional abuse by a husband of his wife).

2. Draw a matrix (see below) and as people identify different types of violence and abuse, write those types on the horizontal column (the column going across) at the top of the matrix. After the participants are satisfied that they have listed as many forms of violence as they can think of, stop and write the same list on the vertical column (the one going down the left side of the matrix), starting the vertical list with the last category listed in the horizontal column. Put an X in the boxes where the pairs are repeated. For example, looking at the matrix below, A, B, C, etc., each represent a type of GBV identified by community members. The X's represent boxes where no ranking is needed, since other boxes already make the same comparisons of A with C, A with B, and B with C. Remember that you do not need to prioritize in terms of worst types of violence at this point, you only need to list different types of violence affecting women and girls in the target community.

	A: emotional abuse by husbands of wives	B: physical abuse by husbands of wives	C: sexual harassment of women or girls on the street
C: sexual harassment of women or girls on the street			X
B: physical abuse by husbands of wives		X	X
A: emotional abuse by husbands of wives	X	X	X

3. Starting in the upper left-hand corner, ask participants: 'Compare the problem or issue identified in the horizontal row with the problem or issue identified in the vertical column. Which is the more important of the two?' Let the group discuss and record one answer in the cell.

4. Continue comparing problems listed in the rows with the problems listed in the first column. Be sure to give the group plenty of time to discuss. It is through this discussion that individual's ranking criteria will emerge and people will begin to understand why another person holds an opinion different from his or her own. This understanding is the most critical part of conducting a pair-wise ranking.
5. Move on to 'pair-wise' comparisons with the problem in the second column of the problems listed in the rows.
6. Continue the process of pair-wise ranking until all cells in the matrix have been filled.
7. Next, tally the results, recording the numerical score (count) in the appropriate column. Then prioritize the problems. First priority goes to the problem which received the highest score, second priority to the next, and so on.
8. Discuss the resulting prioritization with participants. Most importantly, given the discussion and process, ask if participants feel that the ranking reflects reality (e.g. if a community group is going to move ahead with a sexual violence prevention program, will the people support it? Will they participate? Does it speak to their needs?).
9. Remember to record the visual output, identifying place, dates, names of participants, if possible, and provide a narrative description of the process and explanation of the data.

Note:

Pair-wise ranking can also be used to rank other issues, such as what kinds of interventions the community feels are most important to reduce violence against women and girls. In this case, sample lead questions might be: What do you think are the most effective methods for reducing sexual violence against women in this community? What do you think are the most effective methods for reducing domestic violence against women in this community?

CAUSAL FLOW ANALYSIS GUIDELINES⁸

A causal flow analysis illustrates people's perceptions about the relationship between the causes and effects of a selected issue or problem. This tool can be extremely useful in understanding some of the underlying causes of or contributing factors to GBV, and thus can be used to stimulate discussions about strategies for reducing or eliminating GBV.

The procedure should be as follows:

1. Once rapport has been established with a group of community participants, ask participants questions about the causes and effects of violence against women and girls in their community. It may be helpful to link back to comments group members made in the mapping or pair-wise ranking exercises. For example, "You mentioned that lack of security was a cause of sexual violence, let's talk about that. Why does sexual violence occur?"
2. On a flipchart, draw a circle and indicate the topic for discussion, which in this example is sexual violence. Ensure that all of the participants understand the topic so that they can participate fully (see next page).
3. The facilitator then asks participants to list the causes of the problem or situation.
4. Causes are written on the left-hand side of the topic with the arrows drawn in to the center (i.e. from left to right, or \rightarrow). Write clearly and recheck the direction of the arrows. Try to help the participants differentiate between "causes" and "contributing factors" (see next page).
5. Once the list of causes has been exhausted ask participants to list the effects of the problem. Again, let the group discuss as much as necessary before beginning to record effects on the right hand side of the topic. The topic is linked to effects by arrows drawn out from the center (again from left to right). Recheck the direction of the arrows. This is one of the most common errors in drawing causal flow diagrams.
6. Now "interview" the diagram, i.e. ask open-ended question about each cause and each effect. The diagrams can become quite elaborate and will allow you to delve more deeply into an issue. Think about this exercise in terms of unpeeling the outer layers of an onion to get to the inner core.
7. Try limiting the number of causes/effects to 20 or so. Simpler diagrams tend to be easier to follow.
8. Record the visual output, identifying it as necessary e.g. place, dates, names of participants, and including a narrative description of the process.

Causes and Contributing Factors⁹

Causes: Gender Issues

- Male and/or society attitudes of disrespect or disregard of females
- Lack of equality of human rights for all
- Cultural/social norms of gender inequality or discrimination

Contributing Factors (CF)

- Alcohol/drug use
- Unequal distribution of resources such as food, fuel, water, etc., to women and men, so that women may be generally more vulnerable and at greater risk of sexual exploitation or other forms of GBV
- Single mother households
- Poverty, low levels of unemployment
- Community/camp leadership primarily male
- Conflict/post-conflict collapse of traditional society and family supports
- Harmful traditional practices
- Lack of security, police protection
- Lack of laws addressing GBV
- War, i.e. rape as a weapon of war

Introduction¹⁰

Prevalence research involves using a questionnaire to conduct structured interviews with a representative sample of a population, so that the results of the interviews can give information about the whole population. In fact, a very important advantage of prevalence research is its ability to represent the circumstances of an entire population. Another very important advantage of prevalence research is its comparability; that is, the data collected from the research can be compared to other data that has been collected elsewhere using similar techniques. Comparability in GBV research is an especially important objective in that it offers the opportunity to analyze women and girls' vulnerability to violence in multiple contexts, as well as in the same contexts over time.

To date, the few existing prevalence surveys conducted in humanitarian settings have not prioritized comparability, and as a result it has been difficult to draw cross-cultural comparisons or conclusions about the nature and scope of GBV among conflict-affected women and girls. In order to promote comparability, the survey questionnaire should, whenever possible, incorporate questions that have been tested previously and have generated reliable responses, as does the survey questionnaire included in this manual.

Conducting population-based prevalence research on GBV requires extensive technical, financial, and logistical resources. And, unlike qualitative research techniques such as situational analysis and focus groups, prevalence research does not typically generate detailed information about specific incidents of GBV or about service delivery issues. Although prevalence research requires research participants to reveal their experiences of violence, the survey process employs structured questionnaires that do not promote in-depth exploration of participants' unique histories or allow for researchers to act as counselors or case managers.

Prevalence research is therefore not recommended as a method for collecting data on GBV at the early stages of program planning, especially in settings where few services (and thus, few referrals for research participants) exist. Rather, prevalence research on GBV can be a valuable method for established programs (who are able to provide support and referrals to participants) to more accurately and scientifically identify the nature and scope of GBV in their community and use that data for conducting local, national, and international advocacy and education.

The methodology for conducting the research should also be informed by techniques that have been developed previously, to minimize danger to participants and researchers and maximize positive outcomes such as accurate levels of reporting and participants' feelings of well-being. The World Health Organization has taken the global lead in establishing standards for conducting research on violence against women. The following is a summary of WHO's recommendations regarding ethics of GBV research.

Ethical Considerations for Research on Gender-Based Violence¹¹

Important ethical considerations must be taken into account when conducting research on GBV. The nature of the topic demands that special emphasis be placed on issues of safety and confidentiality. The physical and mental well-being of both the respondents and the researchers could be at risk if these issues are not adequately addressed before the study begins. In addition, such studies must be methodologically sound. It is unethical to conduct a poorly-designed study that will fail to address the study objectives when the nature of the topic places respondents at risk and asks them to discuss painful and difficult experiences. Measures to ensure the protection of respondents must be integrated into the study design, so that the research is conducted ethically and sensitively.

The safety of the survey respondents is of primary importance. If a perpetrator becomes aware of the topic of the study, he may inflict further violence on the respondent. The survey should be introduced to the community at large as a study of women's health. However, the respondent herself must be fully informed of the topic and the questions involved so that she may give her informed consent. Likewise, she should understand that she may choose not to participate in the research or to end the interview at any time.

Confidentiality is essential to protect the safety of the respondent. No names should be written on questionnaires. Any necessary identifying information, such as information about a selected household, should be kept separately from the survey questionnaires. All interviews should be conducted in private, preferably outside the home, and the interviewer must be prepared to switch to a less sensitive line of questioning if the interview is interrupted for any reason. The respondent should be informed in advance that the interviewer will switch to a less sensitive subject such as family planning, menstruation, child spacing, or other reproductive health topics if the interview is interrupted. Logistics planning must take into account the fact that some interviews may need to be rescheduled for a more convenient time and alternative locations may be needed to conduct the interviews privately.

Interviewers conducting GBV research should receive special training. They should be experienced at discussing sensitive issues, and trained to maintain strict confidentiality. Questions must be posed in a supportive and non-judgmental way to avoid stigmatizing the respondent. Training should help them to overcome their own biases, fears and stereotypes. Interviewers should understand when to end an interview if the impact on the respondent is too negative, and allow a respondent time to collect herself if she is distressed during the interview. All interviews should be ended on a positive note with the interviewer reinforcing the respondent's own coping mechanisms and reminding her that the information she shared is important and will be used to help other women. Interviewers should be trained to refer women who request them to support services. If no support services exist in the community, the research team should make them available during the research study. It is unethical to conduct a study of GBV if support services cannot be made available to respondents who need them. Finally, interviewers should receive special support to deal with the stress of listening to stories of violence and abuse.

Prevalence Survey Questionnaire

The survey questionnaire included in this section has been piloted in both East Timor and Kosovo, and used to conduct national research in Rwanda. The questionnaire was created for humanitarian settings by researchers at the University of Arizona, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and the RHR Consortium, so that it could be applied cross-culturally to collect prevalence data relevant to the country under investigation as well as allow for international comparisons/contrasts. The questionnaire consists of items taken from the WHO multi-country studies on domestic violence, Demographic and Health Surveys (DHS), CDC reproductive health surveys, a Physicians for Human Rights survey, and the Impact of Events Scale and Hopkins Symptom Checklist.

While it is expected that limited content adjustments to this standardized questionnaire will be made in order to ensure cultural relevance (such as changes in response patterns and wording in order to preserve the general meaning of each question), the broad sweep of items in the questionnaire is meant to limit the extent to which questions will need to be revised/removed/rearranged. The questionnaire is designed so that individual sections, such as those on conflict, post-conflict, displacement, and abduction, can be removed in their entirety (if they are not deemed relevant to the particular setting) without significantly changing the structure of the questionnaire and affecting its validity, reliability, or comparability. It is requested that field staff considering undertaking GBV prevalence research in humanitarian settings contact the RHR Consortium about their intent to use this questionnaire.

Section 4: GBV During the [Occupation and] Conflict

Now I would like to ask you some questions about difficult things you may have experienced as a result of the conflict in this country. I am going to read items from a list of things. Many people may have experienced one or more of these things during the conflict. I know it may be difficult to acknowledge if any of these things happened to you, but please remember that what you tell me is completely confidential and your answers will help us get a sense of the needs of women in our society. If anyone should interrupt us during the interview, I will immediately switch to a less sensitive line of questioning. First I will ask about what happened during the conflict, then I will ask what happened while you were displaced from your home, and finally I will ask questions about your life here after the war. Most of the questions will be the same for each time period that we discuss, so you will be hearing many of the same questions more than once. The reason why we repeat each set of questions for each time period is because it helps us get a better sense of exactly when women in this country were most vulnerable.

Right now I am going to ask you questions specifically about what happened during the conflict, by persons outside your family such as soldiers, militia, police officers, and guards. These acts could have happened in places such as your home, at work or on the road. I'm talking about the time period beginning in [year], up until the end of conflict in [year]. However, I only want to know about what happened to you during this period while you were living in your home. If you ever left your home during the conflict, that is, if you ever became displaced as a result of the conflict, I will later ask you more specific questions about what happened to you when you left your home. For the questions below, please only think of experiences that happened while you were living in your home, before you were displaced by the conflict.

44.	During the conflict in [home country] were you subjected to any of the following violent acts by people such as soldiers, police, or community members? Please remember that I am asking about the TOTAL number of times you experienced each act during the period beginning _____ and ending _____. SECTION 5: GBV DURING DISPLACEMENT

Now I would like to focus on difficulties that may have happened to you since you first fled the conflict. Right now I am only trying to understand what happened to you after you left your home in [home country]. Like before, I am asking about things that may have been done to you by persons outside your family such as soldiers, militia, police officers, and guards. The period I am asking about includes the moment you left your house (because of the conflict) until the time you returned to your house. These acts could have happened in places such as on the road, in a refugee camp, or in another village. Many of these are the same questions that I asked you earlier, but now I am would like to know if any of them were done to you while you were displaced by persons outside your family. Please remember that if you need to, we can stop and take a break at any time. And also please remember that I will continue to make sure your answers are absolutely confidential.

69	Now I am going to read the same list as I did before, but I am asking for the time period in which you were displaced. Please remember that we are referring to things that may have happened to you as a result of violence experienced by people outside of your family, such as military, police, border control guards, etc. Also remember that we are trying to understand the TOTAL number of times you may have experienced these things while you were displaced. Section 6: GBV Post-Conflict

Now I would like to ask you some questions about what has happened to you since you returned home from the conflict, or, if you were not displaced, since the conflict ended in [month/year]. These questions are the same as the ones I asked before, and this is the last time I'll be asking this set of questions. These acts could have happened to you at home, in your community, or elsewhere in [home country], and could have been done to you by anyone in your community, including members of the police, military, humanitarian community, or your neighbors and other people who live in your community. Like the questions before, we are still asking about violence that was committed against you by people outside of your family.

94.	After the conflict, how often were you subjected to any of these forms of physical violence by people outside of your family? I am asking you to remember the TOTAL number of times from the end of the conflict [year] until now. These acts could have been done by anyone in your community who are not family members. SECTION 8: CHILDHOOD VIOLENCE

Now we are going to change topics and discuss your experiences in your own family. As I mentioned before, anything you tell me will remain absolutely confidential, and there will be no way for anyone to identify you or any of your family members. We are asking these questions because we are trying to better understand the lives of women, including their experiences in their families, so that we can better understand what kind of assistance women need.

One thing that is true for many people, both men and women, is that they see or experience mistreatment in their households. Now I'd like to ask you a few brief questions about when you were a child and adolescent; that is before you were 18.

SECTION 9: INTIMATE PARTNER VIOLENCE ATTITUDES

Now I would like to ask you questions about some aspects of the relationship between couples. These questions are very general—just to get a sense of what your thoughts are about relationships between couples. There are no wrong or right answers, so feel free to answer the first thing that comes into your mind.

135. In this community and elsewhere, people have different ideas about families and what is acceptable behavior for men and women in the home. I am going to read you a list of statements and I would like for you to tell me whether you agree or disagree with the statement. Please remember that there are no right or wrong answers. Also remember I am not asking you specifically about what happens with your husband/partner/boyfriend, but about more general thoughts you have about relationships. Current Partner

Now I would like to ask you more specific questions about your relationship with your current husband/partner/boyfriend. When we use the term boyfriend, we are referring to a man with whom you have what you consider to be a serious (intimate, sexual) relationship—we are talking about the same person about whom we asked you some questions when we first started this interview.

I know that some of these questions are very personal, and these are things that people in our community don't normally talk about freely. However, your answers are very important for helping us to understand the condition of women in [home country].

138.	If your current husband/partner(boyfriend) had a problem at work or home, with whom do you think he would be most likely to discuss this problem?	1. Respondent 2. Friends 3. SECTION 10: MENTAL HEALTH

We are almost finished with the interview. I want to thank you for your patience and willingness to complete this survey. Before we end, I would like to ask you a few questions about how you are feeling about your life right now.

171. Since the conflict started up until today, what has been the most traumatic or hurtful experience for you? Please select one experience that you consider to be the most difficult. (describe)	_____ _____ _____ _____

Now I am going to list some difficulties people commonly have after stressful life events. Please listen to each item, and then indicate how distressing each difficulty has been for you DURING THE PAST FEW WEEKS with respect to the most traumatic or hurtful events you have experienced. How much were you distressed or bothered by these difficulties? (read each statement and answer choices – circle answer)

WE are almost finished. Before we end, I would like to ask you to do one thing:

FACE CARD

I would like to now give you a card. On this card there are two pictures. No other information is written on the card. The first picture is of a sad face, and the second is of a happy face.

No matter what you have already told me, I would like you to put a mark next to the sad picture if, someone outside your family has ever touched you sexually or made you do something sexual that you did not want to do.

Please put a mark next to the happy face if this has never happened to you. Once you mark the card, please fold it over and put it in this bag, along with many other women's responses. This will ensure that I do not know your answer.

GIVE RESPONDENT CARD AND PEN. DO NOT LOOK AT RESPONSE—ONCE CARD FOLDED, ASK RESPONDENT TO PUT IT INTO A BAG THAT ALSO CONTAINS OTHER COMPLETED CARDS IN FRONT OF THE RESPONDENT. DO NOT RECORD DETAILS OF QUESTIONNAIRE IDENTIFICATION ON CARD.

NARRATIVE RESPONSE

We have now finished the interview. Do you have any comments, or is there anything else you would like to add about the topics we have discussed today?

FINISH ONE—if respondent has disclosed problems/violence.

I would like to thank you very much for helping us. I appreciate the time that you have taken. I realize that these questions may have been difficult for you to answer, but it is only by hearing from women themselves that we can really understand about their health and experiences of violence.

From what you have told us, I can tell you that you have had some very difficult times in your life. However, from what you have told me I can see that you are strong, and have survived through some difficult circumstances.

Here is a list of organizations that provide support, legal advice and counseling services to women in the study location. Please do contact them if you would like to talk over your situation with anyone. Their services are free, and they will keep anything that you say private. You can go whenever you feel ready to, either soon or later on.

Because these questions we have asked you are very sensitive, we request that you do not discuss this research with anyone in your family or community. By not discussing with anyone, you are helping us to make sure that the research is confidential and that all those who participate in the research will not be negatively affected by the research.

FINISH TWO—if respondent has not disclosed problems/violence.

SECTION I: RESEARCH OVERVIEW

A. Basic Research Terminology

Quantitative Research involves collecting and analyzing data. A questionnaire is used to collect data from a sample of the population so that the results can give information about the whole population.

Qualitative Research involves using interviews and observations to describe situations. It usually does not involve statistical analysis. One example of qualitative research is a focus group, that is, a group of people who are gathered together to discuss specific issues.

The group you want to learn about is called the population. Often the group of people you want to study is too large to be tested. The sample is the group of people you select to be in your study who will give you information about the whole population.

Random sampling is when every person in the population has an equal chance of being selected to be in the sample. This is an effective way to make sure that the sample reflects the population as a whole.

Example: You wish to know some information about a village of 100 people but you don't have time to talk to everyone who lives in the village. You have a list of everyone who lives in a village numbered from 1 to 100. You decide that you need a sample of 30 people to find out the information you need. You have a computer pick 30 numbers randomly between 1 and 100. You then pick the people on the list with these selected numbers for your sample. These selected people are the only ones who will be asked whether they want to participate in the research.

The question of how large a sample size should be can be a difficult one. If the sample is too small, you will not be able to make valid conclusions from your sample. If the sample is too large, you can waste time and money. Usually the kind of analysis you use with the information will determine how large the sample ought to be. In general, the more information you want, the larger your sample will have to be.

Reliability refers to how consistent a questionnaire is. A questionnaire is considered reliable if it gives us the same result over and over again.

Validity refers to how well the questionnaire measures what it is supposed to be measuring. Will other similar tests give similar results?

Action-based Research focuses on practical, not theoretical significance. The goal is to gain knowledge to apply to the local situation.

B. General Logistics

Purpose of study:

This survey has been designed to improve understanding of the extent and effects of violence women may experience in their lives. The survey will involve interviewing women between the ages of [____]. We are conducting this survey with the goal of trying to increase resources for women's programs, increase sensitivity to women's issues, and improve the lives of women affected by violence.

All information obtained and received in the process of conducting research will be held in the strictest confidence.

Interview Teams:

Following a minimum of ten days in training, teams of interviewers will be selected to work at field sites, Monday-Friday, for a minimum of [days/weeks]. Each team will receive on-site supervision by a research coordinator. Each interviewer within each team will submit their questionnaires for review by the supervisor at the close of each interview. Women from the community will be recruited to participate in the survey by locaters.

Locaters:

One locater for each village under investigation will be identified and asked to participate in a minimum of five days of training: two days in which the basic research concepts and the research plan will be reviewed, a third day in which the locaters will work separately with a supervisor in reviewing their specific responsibilities, and two additional days in which the locaters will join with the interviewers for a practice field test. During the survey, two locaters will each be working in a village each day to identify women willing to participate in the survey. The locaters will go to pre-selected houses in each village to invite women to participate in the survey. The locaters will explain the basic components of the survey to the potential participant. If the woman agrees to participate, she will be guided, and where necessary, transported, to the survey site, where interviewers will be waiting to conduct the survey.

Drivers:

are responsible for transporting the interview teams from [a central location] to the selected field sites each day. Departure time will be [hour/minute]. After dropping off the interviewers at the interview site, each driver will transport the locaters to pre-selected houses where the locaters will invite women to participate in the surveys. The drivers should be accessible by cell phone or walkie-talkie at all times. At the end of the day, the drivers will be responsible for returning the interviewers back to [a central location]. Departure from the villages to the [central location] will be no later than [hour/minute] each day.

Supervisors:

There will be one supervisor based at each interview site every day. Each supervisor will be responsible for overseeing their interview team. They will also be responsible for ensuring data is collected properly, that security and safety precautions are reinforced, and that all aspects of survey implementation proceed smoothly. Supervisors will be working with the locaters to assist selection of survey participants.

C. Security Issues

The safety and security of the interviewers, locaters, drivers, and survey participants are very important. Security issues generally override any other rules or obligations related to the research. Supervisors at each site will be equipped with cell phones or walkie-talkies, as will both drivers. Each person with the cell phone should be responsible for ensuring that the phones are in good working order and equipped with sufficient card minutes each day.

As you know, this study asks the participants about some very painful experiences they might have had. The questions may stir up strong feelings in both the participant and the interviewer. This manual will provide some basic information about dealing with these feelings as they come up. This manual will also provide some basic information on how to address emergency situations, including who you can call for help in dealing with the participant's or your own reactions to the interview.

You are not expected nor is it your responsibility to provide mental health treatment to participants. However, you should be prepared to provide a list of people with whom the participant and her family may consult.

We have asked helpers in the community to consent to have their names placed on a resource list. This list can be handed out to participants at the time of the interview, and will be provided to you during training. You must ensure, however, that you will not put the participant at risk by providing written referrals for assistance that may later be discovered by a partner or other family member. If the participant does not feel safe taking written materials but does request further assistance, the interviewer should assist the participant in developing a strategy for seeking out services subsequent to the interviewer.

D. Emergency Procedures

We have established procedures that will assist staff to know how to respond to an emergency and what to expect at that time. We do not anticipate that emergencies will happen often, if at all, but it is important for all research staff to read the following carefully. Also please use common sense in dangerous situations: get out of danger, leave immediately and get assistance.

EXAMPLES OF POSSIBLE EMERGENCY SITUATIONS:

- 1) A medical emergency. For example, a participant has a heart attack and needs medical treatment. Hospitalization may be needed or a situation may arise that requires police intervention.
- 2) A participant is having flashbacks. For example, the person who has experienced significant trauma, such as a rape survivor, starts to feel as though she is back in the traumatic setting. You try to talk to her but she just keeps staring at you. She could be hearing or seeing (“reliving”) the traumatic event.
- 3) A participant seems suicidal. For example, she tells you that she has attempted suicide within the last six months or she says that she is planning on killing herself in the near future. The attempt seems particularly imminent; she reports a suicide plan or describes how she is planning to kill herself.
- 4) A participant has threatened to hurt or kill someone. A participant expresses intent to harm a specific person, such as a husband or neighbor. This participant may also be more likely to becoming dangerous or violent within the interview situation.
- 5) Someone at the household (for example, a husband) becomes abusive to the locator and/or driver. This situation may be a potential risk if a member of the household determines the nature of the survey, and becomes angry about a potential disclosure by the participant.
- 6) The interviewer suspects current child abuse. The information revealed suggests that a child has been abused or mistreated by the participant or someone known to the participant.

IF YOU FIND YOURSELF IN AN EMERGENCY SITUATION:

- 1) If you are in a dangerous situation, leave immediately to the site supervisor to report the situation.
- 2) If, as in the case of the locator or driver, you cannot immediately reach the site supervisor by cell phone, return immediately to the site to report the incident to the supervisor. If the emergency is a medical one in which there is absolutely no danger to the driver or the locator, transport the participant to the hospital and then immediately return to the site to report the incident to the supervisor. If the situation is one of risk to a potential participant by a family member and the participant wishes to leave the household, immediately assist the participant in leaving the household and return with the participant to the site.

E. Ethics of Conducting Research

RIGHTS OF RESEARCH PARTICIPANTS:

Even though we want as many of the selected individuals to participate as possible, there are ethical guidelines to protect the rights of the research participants. All research follows these strict ethical guidelines. The rules listed below must be adopted by all interviewers and locators to ensure participants' rights and to minimize any potential for harm.

- 1) People have the right to refuse to participate in the study.
- 2) People have the right to withdraw from the study at any time.
- 3) Participants must be informed about the general purpose of the study. Each participant needs to be given information explaining the purpose of the study.
- 4) Participants must be informed about what they will be asked to do if they agree to participate in this study. This study asks participants about their experiences with violence and trauma, demographic information, health, and several other issues.
- 5) Participants must be informed of the potential risks associated with participation in the study. These risks may include psychological discomfort related to discussion of topics that may be painful. Participating in the study may involve some inconvenience by requiring up to one hour of their time.

- 6) Participants must be informed of potential benefits associated with participation in the study. Information that is collected from this study will be used to help generate awareness about the impact of violence on women's lives. However, women will not receive any compensation personally for their participation other than referral to services should they request them.
- 7) Participants must be informed about confidentiality. All information shared by the participants will be kept confidential. Participants will remain anonymous, which means that code numbers will be on the materials instead of names. The site supervisors will take precautions for safe-guarding all materials.
- 8) Participants must be informed about who they can contact if they have any questions about the study.
- 9) Participants must complete a PARTICIPANT CONSENT FORM to indicate that they have been informed of their rights as research participants. Participants may complete the form by giving verbal consent or by making an 'x' on the consent form.

F. Responsibilities of the Interviewer

Interviewing is very different from the ways we talk to other people. You are conducting a research interview that is very structured. Before research studies can be completed successfully and before the investigators can be confident that the data collected are accurate, there are certain procedures and rules to be followed.

1. Attend and complete all training sessions and practice interviews.

2. Agree to the rules of confidentiality and sign confidentiality contract.

Confidentiality is a crucial part of data collection. If people feel that the information given will be told to others at a later date, their responses may not be totally accurate. Moreover, failing to preserve confidentiality may directly or indirectly cause harm to participants and researchers. However, there may be exceptions to breaking confidentiality, such as when a participant tells you that they may hurt themselves or others. In these cases, immediately seek assistance from your site supervisor.

3. Make every effort to protect the welfare of the participants at all times.

- a) In all studies it is important to conduct the interview in private, only with the participant. If there is someone else present while you are conducting the interview, ask for assistance from site supervisor in moving to a private area.
- b) Build rapport with the participant. Rapport is the relationship that the interviewer and participant will create so there is the trust and willingness to share the personal information in the survey questions. Establishing rapport can usually be done by being friendly, and taking a somewhat leisurely attitude toward the interview. Do not proceed with the interview until you are sure the participant is relatively comfortable with the interviewer and the surroundings.
- c) DO NOT write any confidential information concerning the respondent on the questionnaire (i.e. person's name or where she lives).
- d) Do not force participant to answer questions they are not comfortable answering.
- e) Be aware of your voice. Do not give the impression that you are being critical, you are surprised, or you approve or disapprove of the answers.
- f) Notify the site supervisor immediately of any difficulties that are encountered during or as a result of the procedure.
- g) Follow standard procedure for dealing with participants upset by the interview.

4. Follow established interviewing procedures, so that all interviews are conducted in the same way, with every participant.

- a) Obtain interview material in advance and review material packets for completeness.
- b) Never copy questionnaires and never change questionnaire numbers.
- c) Follow procedures and mark off each activity when it is completed.
- d) Clearly ask the participant questions and record answers with participant's consent.
- e) In all cases where questions involve written responses, neatly print responses.

- f) If a respondent answers “don’t know” to any question or refuses to answer any question, an effort at recall should be encouraged with a probe such as “Could you give me your best guess?”
- g) If probing to obtain an answer fails, circle the “DK” or “REF” response for that question.
- h) If you are unsure which answer choice to circle based on the participant’s response, excuse yourself and ask for help from the site supervisor.

5. Follow standard methods for correcting data during the interview and after the interview is completed.

- a) If you circle the wrong answer or make an error in a write-in entry during the interview, neatly and completely erase the mistake and circle the correct answer or write in the correct entry.
- b) Edit questionnaire at the close of each interview, while the participant is still sitting with you.
- c) In the case of missing data, complete with participant.
- d) Invite participant to have coffee or cookies while you submit the questionnaire to the site supervisor.
- e) Review the questionnaire with the site supervisor.
- f) If there is still missing data, return to the participant, bring her back to the confidential interviewing area, and complete the missing data.
- g) Request answers for missing data questions and/or request clarification on ambiguous responses. Never guess at the answer to a question.
- h) Be sure all questions that should have been answered by the participant have a response marked or written in.
- i) Be sure that all write-in responses are legible.
- j) Be sure that all stray marks have been removed from the areas designated for response categories.
- k) Transcribe messy or hard to read pages onto blank questionnaire pages.

G. Interviewer Skills

The Interviewer takes on a role as a person who will ask important questions when she begins to interact with the participant. The interviewer conveys to the participant that this interview is valuable. The interviewer must present herself in a way that indicates that she is trustworthy, she can be counted on to keep confidentiality, and will not make judgments about the person.

1) When Meeting the Participant:

The interviewer introduces herself and identifies the organization she is working with or representing. She informs the participant what kind of information she will be asking about and obtains her consent to participate.

2) During the Interview:

There may be times when you become very uncomfortable. You may not understand what is going on with the participant. You may be uncertain about the wisdom of proceeding with the interview, especially if you feel that you are in danger. Take the time to consider options and decide what to do: stop, take a break, and seek assistance from your site supervisor. Trust your gut reactions and don’t just keep moving on automatically.

Be alert to the participant’s responses and offer breaks if necessary. If a participant is clearly upset, ask “Would you like to take a break?” or “Can I get you some water?” Whether or not a participant is upset, if the interview goes over one hour, take time for a brief break. Remember, only leave when the person is calm, not when he or she is very upset!

3) At the End the Interview:

Thank the respondent for taking part in this survey reassuring them that all information they have submitted will be held in the strictest confidence. Inform them that this information will be put into a report and will be used to help alleviate existing problems of safety and violence against women, for planning future services, and in trying to establish an educational prevention program, thus making their community a safer place to live in.

4) General Tips on Interviewing Behavior:

In this type of survey, there are times when you want to say or do something that is comforting. Remember that you are not a mental health clinician and your main objective is to complete the survey. For the purposes of this study, your role does not involve probing about feelings or providing counseling. You are neither a therapist nor a close friend of the family and must behave accordingly. Your demeanor toward the study participants should be friendly, polite and empathetic, while at the same time maintaining a professional distance. The following are some suggested guidelines for appropriate interviewer behavior.

- a) AVOID EXCESSIVE SOCIALIZING
You should not allow the interview to become an occasion for socializing. You should chat with the participants for a few moments on arriving and leaving and answer all their questions about the study. Avoid getting involved in lengthy conversation, either before, during or after the interview.
- b) MAINTAIN A NEUTRAL AND ACCEPTING ATTITUDE
You must not react with shock or disapproval to anything the participant tells you in the interview. Sometimes participants will report behavior that you may find disturbing. It is very important not to show your reaction if you feel this way; otherwise, you may not only upset the participant, but potentially discourage her from being honest in answering the questions. Your attitude should be matter-of-fact and accepting. If certain questions in the interview make you uncomfortable, give them extra practice, until you feel at ease reading them. If you are relaxed, it will help the participant to relax.
- c) BE RESPONSIVE TO THE PARTICIPANT
If the participant tells you about a sad event or becomes upset during the interview, you should not ignore her feelings; be responsive and sympathetic and allow her to talk a little about the event before continuing. If the situation seems to be leading to a lengthy discussion, you may suggest that the discussion be continued after the interview is completed. If a participant becomes very upset during the interview, suggest a break; do not wait for the participant to ask. Without being rude, try to avoid getting into personal discussions about yourself. You may have to answer a few questions to be polite, but be as general and noncommittal as possible and change the focus to the participant as soon as you can.
- d) TREAT THE PARTICIPANT WITH RESPECT
You should try to answer all questions as completely as you can. You may also encounter participants who are hostile or defensive. Please try to maintain a neutral a manner as possible in these situations and, if necessary, ask the site supervisor for assistance.
- e) AVOID GIVING CLINICAL OPINIONS
Because the study has some questions about physical and mental health issues, participants may ask your opinion about problems. You should not give your opinion about any aspect of physical or emotional well being. You should explain that you are not a trained health worker, and you are not in a position to give an opinion. If the participant is very concerned, you may suggest that she may want to talk to someone, and provide her with a list of resources.
- f) RESPOND TO PARTICIPANT’S CONCERNS
The participants may become concerned when they say “yes” to a number of symptom questions. They may ask: “Does that mean there is something wrong with me?” In general, it’s best to be noncommittal in your response, since there may indeed be something wrong and you don’t want to give false reassurance. You can say: “Saying ‘yes’ doesn’t always mean there’s something wrong; a lot of people say ‘yes’ to these questions.” If the participants seem really worried, suggest they talk their concerns over with a health care provider.

MORE HELPFUL HINTS

- Slow, clear speech.
- Repeat instructions and/or question when needed.
- Use the guidelines within the handbook for each question if clarification is needed for the participant beyond repetition.

- If pressured by the participant to give examples of responses where it is not indicated that you should list responses (many times participants want to know what we want to hear - they are trying to avoid the shame of a wrong answer), gently say "I need YOU to tell me" or "I can only read the question" or "Whatever you say is the right answer."
- All of the participant's answers are correct.
- Encourage breaks, breaths.
- Allow breaks at any time. Even if you are halfway through a page you can always finish the page after the break.
- Stress to the participant that it is okay to cry.
- Encouragement such as "we're moving along fine" can be helpful.

THINGS YOU NEVER WANT TO DO:

- Yawn during the interview.
- Refuse a break when asked.
- Use judgmental language - "You had a BAD month?" "Now that's a GOOD answer."
- Ask questions that are not in the study.
- Tell the participant not to cry. Tell the participant not to feel the way they feel.
- Be funny or sarcastic.
- Sound irritated.
- Act bored, try to hurry the participant.

F. Stress Management for Interviewers

Continually talking about and working with the issue of personal experiences can be stressful. At the close of each day, a time for group discussion will be set aside so that interviewers can talk about any issues they have related to their own emotional strains. If there are concerns that are not addressed during the group discussions, please seek out the site supervisor. You are not expected to do this work alone!

Here are some basic ways to manage stress:

- 1) Take care of your Emotional Self:
Get support for yourself by talking with someone. If you need to talk right away, you may want to speak to your site supervisor. If you do not wish to speak to your site supervisor, names on the resource list are available. Call someone or talk with someone after a particularly troublesome contact.
- 2) Take care of your Physical Self:
Get enough rest, exercise, and eat properly.
- 3) Take care of your Intellectual Self:
Make attempts to think about what your goals are in this work. Those goals should balance with your emotional needs.
- 4) Take care of your Spiritual Self:
Seek spiritual help according to your beliefs.

INTERVIEWER CONTRACT

(to be signed by interviewer and given to supervisor on first day of interviewer training)

Confidentiality means that information is not shared outside the setting where it was obtained; it is kept private. There are several types of confidentiality involved with this study.

- 1) Employee confidentiality means that personal information that interviewers, Site Coordinators and other Participants in the training share about themselves during the training and afterwards will not be shared outside the training group or Study staff.
- 2) Participant confidentiality means that we will not reveal the names of women who participated in the study. When we share the results of the study with others, no individual's responses will be identified. For Site Coordinators and Interviewers, this means that we will not discuss or reveal names of Participants to anyone except to other Study staff. It also means that we will not discuss any information that we learn during the course of any interview with anyone except for other Study staff.
- 3) Questionnaire Confidentiality means that the interview materials that we will be using are not to be shared with anyone except during the course of an interview. It is important to let Participants in the study know what the study is about and the nature of the questions we will be asking (see Rights of Research Participants). However, we will not show interview materials to people outside of the study. These interview materials are tools for research that are only to be used by people who have been trained to administer them. Always keep the completed interviews in a private, secure place.

As an interviewer, I agree to abide by these rules of confidentiality. I understand that if I do not abide by these rules of confidentiality, I will be subject to dismissal.

SECTION II: QUESTIONNAIRE OVERVIEW

Consent Form

As part of the ethics of conducting research, any participant must be informed about the nature of the research he/she is participating in. All participants must be told that they have the right to refuse to participate in the research and/or withdraw from the interview at any time. No questionnaires can be completed without the verbal or signed consent of the participant.

It is very important that the participant understand that confidentiality will be maintained throughout the interview. If there is a risk that the interviewer or participant may be overheard by anyone in the vicinity, the interviewer should be prepared to stop the interview, or move to a less sensitive line of questioning. The interviewer must monitor the environment to ensure confidentiality. No children of speaking age or older should be allowed to sit with the participant. If children interrupt the interview then the interviewer should stop the questions until the children are taken elsewhere and privacy is again assured.

This survey is directed at women of reproductive age, ages 18-49. The reason for this is because interviewing children (those under the age of 18) requires special research methods, including obtaining parental consent, that are beyond the means of this research process. The second reason is that in order to get representative data on women's reproductive needs, as well as representative data about women who are in relationships, it is helpful to target a certain age range.

Section 1: Background

This section is an introduction in which basic information is collected about the participant, including age, ethnicity, religion, work history, etc. By starting with these general questions, the interviewer can begin the interview with relatively non-threatening questions. Just as importantly, the information gained about each participant's background can provide a basis for comparison when analyzing data for rates and types of GBV according to various ethnic, cultural, and socio-economic variables. Such data can provide information about how to more effectively target services.

Section 2: Life During Displacement and Post-Conflict

This section provides data on the participant's history of displacement. The reason the participants are asked where and how often they've been displaced is because the information provides the basis from which to understand when and where displaced women are most vulnerable, and whether increased movement increases vulnerability. The findings from these questions can not only provide useful information about the nature of violence experienced in the community under investigation, but they also provide useful information to international researchers and activists about the impact of displacement on women's welfare and safety.

The questions that follow the displacement questions provide information about what the participant's current socio-economic circumstances are. As with the background questions in Section 1, these questions provide a basis for comparison when analyzing the survey data for rates of GBV according to variable economic circumstances, household composition (i.e. single mothers), whether or not the proximity of relatives may affect women's vulnerability, etc. The questions about the availability of reproductive health services are asked to ascertain whether women's basic health needs are being met, since there is significant evidence of the reproductive health impact of GBV.

Section 3: Marriage History

This section marks the beginning of questions that may be felt by the participant to be more personal, because these questions ask about topics such as marriage history, marriage choice, dowry, etc., that may not be freely discussed in many communities. It is very important that the interviewer take special care to monitor the participants' reactions to these questions, use direct eye contact, and use body language that supports participants' sharing of information.

The questions in this section are generally meant to provide the interviewer with a background on the participant's relationship history, so that the interviewer will know which questions in Section 9: Intimate Partner Violence, should be asked of that participant. Because the skip patterns in this section can be very confusing, interviewers should spend extra time practicing different responses participants might give.

Here are some questions in Section 3 that may require further explanation:

Q 22: Have you ever been married or lived with a man?

This question is the start of identifying whether the participant has had relationships and which questions regarding intimate partner violence in Section 9 will be important to ask the participant. Because in many cultures women may never have a formal marriage but are "unofficially" married if they have lived with a man, there is no distinction made between being married to a man and living with a man.

If the participant has had any serious relationships, even if she is not currently in a relationship, the interviewer will know that the questions to be asked in Section 9 will include the "attitudes" questions (135-137) and the "lifetime exposure" to intimate partner violence (161-169).

Q 26: How did your most recent relationship end?

If the relationship ended in a divorce or separation that was NOT caused by the husband or participant abandoning the family, then the response should be #1 or #2. However, in all cases where the relationship ended (and a divorce or separation resulted) because the husband abandoned the family, the response should be #4. In the case of the participant abandoning the family, the response should be #6. If the relationship ended for other reasons than those listed, such as the partner moving overseas to seek work and never returning because they could not return, or a partner being in jail, etc., then mark #5 or #6 and be sure to indicate WHY the relationship ended.

Q 27: Do you currently have a partner (boyfriend) you do not live with but with whom you are having a serious (intimate, sexual) relationship?

This question exists in order to get a sense of whether the participant is currently involved in a relationship that is serious and long-term. For the purposes of this research, the "seriousness" of the relationship is determined by whether or not the participant is having an intimate, sexual relationship with her partner. (Methods for judging seriousness of a relationship may vary among cultures and should be discussed in the training of interviewers.)

By asking this question, the interviewer can identify what questions from Section 9: Intimate Partner Violence to ask the participant. Any participant who is in what the participant deems as a serious relationship with a man should be asked background information about the man (34-41) as well as questions in Section 9: Intimate Partner Violence. If the participant does not currently have a partner but has had a partner in the past, they should be asked questions about marriage choice and dowry as they relate to the previous relationship (29-33) as well as questions in Section 9 about "attitudes" (135-137), and "lifetime exposure" to intimate partner violence (161-169).

If the participant has never been in any kind of relationship, then the interviewer will only ask the participant the "attitudes" question of Section 9, and then ask Q169 about exposure to violence by other family members.

Q 29-33: Marriage Choice and Dowry

These questions are to be asked of all participants who have ever lived with a husband or partner, whether or not the participant has a current relationship. These questions exist to determine the extent to which women have the freedom to choose their own partners, and what the attitude of the participant is about dowry. They also exist to provide data on whether marriage choice or dowry has any bearing on rates of intimate partner violence reported in Section 9.

Q 34-41: Demographic information about current partners

These questions provide a basis from which to analyze the demographic characteristics of partners that may influence intimate partner violence, i.e. whether levels of education, or the existence of relatives living nearby, can be related to rates of violence. This information is restricted to current partners because this ensures that demographic data may be directly related to reports about levels of violence by a current partner obtained in Section 9.

Q 42-43: Sisterhood Questions

These questions will provide the background for future "sisterhood" questions that exist in each section of the questionnaire (except Section 8: Childhood Violence, where the question is not limited to sisters, but also includes other siblings). If a participant has a sister that has been in a serious relationship, the interviewer will know to ask the participant about her sister's exposure to intimate partner violence (Section 9, Q 170).

The sisterhood questions exist throughout the questionnaire in order to provide another way to measure rates of violence against women aside from asking direct questions to the participants about the participants' own history of violence. It is thought that even if participants might be reluctant to reveal specific information about violence against themselves, they may feel comfortable responding to more general questions about other people. The reason why the questions are asked about sisters is because it is very likely only one woman from each family will be participating in the survey, and it is therefore very unlikely that more than one sister will be selected to complete the survey. If only one sister is asked these questions, then it is possible to get a realistic rate of violence because each "sisterhood" response by the participants will only count for one person.

This section is the first of several sections that try and understand the nature (type) and scope (frequency) of physical and sexual violence that the participant may have experienced in her life. Because there is a separate section that asks questions about violence experienced by family members, these questions only refer to violence perpetrated by people outside of the participant's immediate family.

There are sections that follow this one that focus on the time periods of displacement and post-conflict. For this reason, the participant must be informed that for the questions in Section 4, they are only asked to remember the violence they experienced BEFORE they were displaced, or, if they were not displaced, BEFORE the end of the conflict. Participants may need to be reminded several times during this section that the questions only refer to incidents that happened before they left their homes (specifically, before they walked out their doors) and became displaced. Interviewers should double check the time period by returning to Q 12 on history of displacement to make sure that the participant was not displaced during the dates the participant indicates within this section that the violence took place.

Q 44: List of types of violence

This question lists types of violence that women may have been exposed to during occupation/conflict. The types of behavior should represent what women in the target community were likely to have experienced. The reason why the types of violence are listed by specific acts is because it is thought that listing specific acts will help the participant to recall experiences that might otherwise be difficult for them to recall during the course of the structured interview. Asking about specific acts also helps to reduce the likelihood that women will not report certain types of violence because their culture doesn't define these forms of mistreatment as acts of violence. The interviewer should read out each type of violence, and wait for the participant to respond. During these questions, the interviewer must constantly monitor the participant's response and must look for clues that the participant is feeling uncomfortable or having painful memories. Should the participant appear distraught, the interviewer should be prepared to provide support and reassurance. In cases where the participant appears overwhelmed, the interviewer should be prepared to pause or stop the interview process.

The responses for these specific acts are according to number of times that the acts were experienced by the participants during the entire period of occupation/conflict. Because it is often the case that a participant might minimize the extent of violence they experienced, or be reluctant to acknowledge how many times they experienced a certain type of violence, or be unable to think clearly about the number of times because of the distress that their memories may cause, the interviewer must gently probe for number of times by asking clarifying questions such as, "When you say a couple of times, do you mean twice? If you mean twice, do you mean twice in one month? In one week?"; etc.

Q 45: Who did these things?

This question exists to determine all those who may have perpetrated violence against the participant. It is important that the interviewer probe for multiple perpetrators, especially if more than one act of violence is recorded in Q 44.

Q 46: One experience of mistreatment

This question asks the participants to focus on ONLY ONE act of violence that they reported in Q 44. In responding to this question, the participants provide some indication of what they perceive as their most difficult experience of violence. Because the experience may include multiple forms of violence (i.e. slapped and hit while being tied up), the interviewer may circle more than one response. However, if the participant is providing multiple responses, the interviewer should double-check to be sure that the participant is describing ONLY ONE incident of violence.

The rationale for this question is that it helps to identify what women feel to be the most serious types of violence committed against them, thus providing researchers and service providers with information about women's subjective interpretation of the severity of their experiences.

Q 47-62: Details of worst experience of violence

These questions provide more specific information on the nature and impact of the worst violence that the participant experienced. All of these questions refer ONLY to Q 44. They do not refer to any other incidents of violence that were experienced by the participant. These questions help the researchers to understand what some of the specific features of the violence may have been, in order to get a better sense of the contexts in which the violence occurs. By gaining knowledge about the context, the data can provide information about risk assessment, health impact, etc.

Of special note:

Q 48: When did this episode happen?

The interviewer should make sure that the participant is describing an experience that occurred during the occupation/conflict, but BEFORE the participant was displaced. The interviewer may find it helpful to return to Q 12 to clarify dates when the participant became displaced. If the dates reported in Q 48 are the same as the dates when the participant was displaced, the interviewer should probe to confirm that the dates for displacement are accurate. If they are, the participant should be told that the interviewer is asking ONLY about experiences that happened BEFORE displacement, and that there will be a separate section on displacement in which violence that occurred during displacement can be recorded.

Q 57: Did you experience any of the following...?

This lists the potential physical or psychological harm that may have resulted from the violent incident. The interviewer should circle all that apply, being sure to clarify the meaning of each response category. Participants should be especially clear that a "loss of consciousness" means that they had a black out, not that they lost their concentration. For "psychological difficulties" the interviewer should identify common psychological reactions that indicate extreme stress in the target culture (which should be discussed and agreed upon during the training of interviewers).

Q 59: What was the main reason you did not seek medical care for your injuries?

This question should ONLY be asked if the participant reported in Q 58 that they did not seek treatment. If the participant did seek treatment, the interviewer should not ask the question, but should circle response #1. If the participant did NOT seek treatment, the interviewer should ask for the MAIN reason that the participant did not seek treatment and then circle more than one response if the participant provides more than one MAIN reason. The interviewer should be careful not to make the respondent feel that she is being blamed for not seeking treatment.

Q 60: Did you tell anyone about what happened during the episode? If you told anyone (other than the people who were with you during the episode), whom did you tell?

When asking this question, the interviewer should be sure to clarify whether the participant ever disclosed the incident of violence to anyone OTHER than the people who were with the participant during the incident.

Q 66: Were any of your sisters over the age of 18...?

The interviewer should be sure to indicate in this response HOW MANY sisters between the ages of 18-49 were assaulted, so that there is no chance of under or over reporting the number of sisters who experienced violence during the occupation/conflict. The reason why the age is limited to 18-49 is that these questions provide a baseline of comparison with the data generated by the participants' reports of their own violence; in order to make the comparison of rates more accurate, the information about the sisters is in the same age grouping as those participating in the survey.

Section 5: GBV During Displacement

The questions in this section are exactly like the questions in the previous section. They are asked again so that the participant has the opportunity to discriminate between violence experience during occupation/conflict and violence experienced during displacement. Because many participants will consider conflict and displacement as the same time period, it is very important that the interviewer specify exactly what is meant by displacement.

if the participant was not displaced, then the interviewer should skip to the last part of this section that asks about sisters' experience of violence during THEIR displacement. Even if sisters were not displaced, Q91 should not be skipped; instead, the interviewer should indicate in the response that the sister(s) were not displaced.

Section 6: GBV Post-Conflict

This section covers the time period either starting from when the war officially ended, or, if the participant was displaced, the time period starting from when the participant returned to their home community (even if not to the same house, since in many cases houses were destroyed). Because participants may be accustomed to thinking in terms of war-related incidents of violence, they should be encouraged to think of ANY experiences that have been perpetrated by ANYONE in their community, outside their immediate family. These might include threats, etc., by neighbors or other community members, threats, etc., by members of the humanitarian community, including peacekeepers, or others. These questions are asked because it is not uncommon that community violence increases following war, since often legal structures are not yet in place to ensure protections for community members.

It is likely that participants will be tired of answering the same questions repeatedly. It will be helpful to let participants know that this is the last time you will be asking this set of questions. The reason why the questionnaire is divided into identical sections according to chronological time periods is because it helps the participant to separate out the periods of conflict, displacement, and post-conflict, and in so doing reduces the possibility that the participant will become confused about which incidents occurred in what time periods. Thus, while the repetition may seem tedious, it is likely to facilitate recall and generate more accurate information.

Section 7: Abduction/Forced Detention

In addition to trying to assess women's vulnerability to short-term detention during conflict, this section tries to address a type of violence that is increasingly a part of conflict around the world: girls and women being kidnapped or otherwise taken away against their will in order to provide labor or sexual services. They may have been "trafficked"—taken across borders and prevented from returning home—or perhaps taken to serve combatants during war. The period of abduction is referred to here as "detention." Abduction does not refer to women who have been forced into marriages within their own communities against their will. This kind of "abduction" should be captured in the section on marriage history in which women are asked whether they chose to be married.

Section 8: Childhood Violence

These questions exist in order to determine a relationship between levels of childhood violence and levels of intimate partner violence.

Q 131-132 As a child or adolescent...

These questions are trying to assess child abuse that resulted in physical harm to the participant or to any of the participant's siblings. The sibling question is included in part because violence against a sibling by a parent can be very traumatic for other children in the family. There may be instances in which children are intimidated in ways that cause extreme psychological distress, but because levels of psychological distress are more subjective and difficult to measure in such a short section, these questions focus on physical harm. Even so, it is important that the interviewer makes sure that the participant recognizes that a bruise of any kind or physical mark constitutes physical harm, and assist the participant in accurately identifying whether they experienced such physical harm.

Q 133 When you were a child, did any person who was older than you....

While the United Nations recognizes that the universal age of adulthood begins at age 18, in many cultures sexual activity begins earlier. Therefore, this question is attempting to assess levels of sexual violence that occurred before the participant was mature enough to give consent, before the participant had become sexually active or physically mature. What constitutes "when you are a child" should be determined during the training of interviewers, and should be clarified for the participant during the interview.

Section 9: Intimate Partner Violence

This section has three major components. The first component includes Q 135-137; these questions inquire about attitudes toward marriage and intimate partner violence, and should be asked of all participants. The second component includes Q 138-160, and tries to determine specific types and levels of violence experienced by women who are currently in relationships.

One primary objective of the second component is to assess whether there has been an increase or decrease in levels of intimate partner violence as a result of the conflict, so this component asks about violence experienced by the SAME partner before and after the conflict. These questions should only be asked of women who are currently involved in a relationship. The third component includes Q 161-168, which asks questions about lifetime exposure to intimate partner violence, and is for any participant who has ever had a relationship.

Section 9 is divided into these three components because the different components offer different information about violence against women, including perspectives on how participants view violence (component 1); what women are currently experiencing and a comparative analysis of levels of violence by their partners before and after the war (component 2); and women's exposure to violence throughout their relationship history (component 3).

These questions exist because they provide information about the partner's and the participant's use of alcohol or drugs. When compared against rates of violence this information may provide data about whether using alcohol or drugs contributes to rates of violence. (During the training of interviewers, it should be clarified what drugs men and women may use in the target culture. For example, in many cultures women may not drink, but they may use drugs that have not been prescribed by a doctor, which could constitute drug abuse.)

Q 146 Are you ever afraid...

When asking this question, the interviewer is trying to understand whether the participant ever feels in danger in the presence of their partner. In this question "fear" does not mean respect, it means a sense that the partner might somehow physically or emotionally hurt the participant or someone the participant cares about.

Q 147 Now I would like you to think back to the year before the conflict...

This question exists so that comparisons can be made between the amount of time women spent with their partners and levels of violence reported.

Q 148 Now I would like to ask you some more specific questions about how your partner treats you....

This question is trying to assess the type and frequency of violence women may have experienced by their partners before the conflict began. The reason why this question is asked is in order to analyze whether women who are currently in relationships have experienced a difference in the levels and types of mistreatment since before and after the conflict. For this reason, the interviewer will only ask this question of women who are currently in a relationship. If a participant was not with the SAME person before and after the conflict, the interviewer should not ask this question, but should mark NA (not applicable) in the response category.

The structure of this question is like those in the previous sections of conflict. The list of specific types of violence is intended to help the participant identify some of the ways in which her partner may have mistreated her. By naming the types of violence, the list provides a prompt for women who may not recall specific types or violence, or who may not think some forms of mistreatment constitute violence. The list should represent the types of mistreatment women are vulnerable to in the target culture. (During the interviewer training it should be confirmed that the list accurately identifies the major forms of mistreatment that women experience in the target culture.)

Q 150: Now I would like to ask you the same set of questions, but I would like for you to think of the time period that starts from now and goes back the last year...

This question attempts to assess the specific types of mistreatment that women may have experienced within the last year. The response patterns are the same as Q 148 because the same responses allow for comparison of types and frequency of violence before the conflict and after the conflict. The reason why the question focuses on the entire last year is because the question is trying to understand what women experience over a specified period of time. It is important that each woman be evaluated over the same period of time in order to make comparisons between women.

There may be some participants who did not have partners before the conflict but who have had partners for the last year (and longer). In this case, the interviewer should mark NA in Q 148 about violence experienced before the conflict, and then should ask the participant about the types of mistreatment they have experienced from their partner in the last year. Even though this will not allow for comparisons of violence from before and after the conflict, it will provide information about what women are experiencing now.

If the participant has not experienced violence by a current partner in BOTH Q 148 and 150, then the interviewer should skip Q 151-160, which ask specific question about the violence they experienced. EVEN IF the partner experienced violence by their current partner in the year before the war but they are NOT experiencing violence now, Q151-160 should still be asked, in order to identify the nature of violence participants experienced before the war. This will help to clarify the levels of violence that occurred before the war and the extent to which they have decreased.

Q161-162 Now I would like you to think back to any of your relationships...

These questions begin the component of Section 9 that is for participants who have ever experienced a relationship. The questions are meant to try and assess whether or not experiences of violence in ANY relationship have EVER resulted in physical injury, and which have lead to the participant seeking help or leaving home. These questions are important because they give information about what the participant has ever experienced, so they provide data not just on the current relationship, but on any relationship that the participant has ever had.

Q 164: Thinking about all your serious (intimate, sexual) relationships with men...

This question is for all participants who have ever been in a relationship, and is intended to assess whether they ever acted in a violent way towards their partner even if they were not trying to defend themselves.

Q 165: In the last 12 months, how often has this happened that you have beaten...

This question identifies what has happened with a current partner. If the participant does not have a current partner, the interviewer should mark NA.

Q 169: Since you were 18 years or older, has anyone in your family or in your husband's/partner's family every beaten you or mistreated you physically?

This question is about mistreatment by other family members. This question should be asked of ALL participants.

Q 170: Have any of your sisters...

This question is about sisters' experience of violence and should be asked of all participants who have sisters between the ages of 18-49 who have been in relationships with men.

Section 10: Mental Health

This section tries to understand the impact that violence may have had on participants' lives.

Q 171: Since the conflict started and up until today...

This question is the first in this questionnaire in which the interviewers are required to write down what the participants say. In order to make the participants' responses as clear and concise as possible, the interviewer should emphasize that they are asking about the MOST traumatic experience. In the space designated, the interviewer should write a detailed description of the experience, which includes type of experience, date of experience, who the perpetrators were, and, very briefly, WHY the participant feels this was their worst experience.

Q 172: Now I am going to list some difficulties...

This question asks the participant to think of the experience they identified in Q160, and to consider how that experience has impacted them. The question ONLY refers to the participants' experiences in the last few weeks. The reason for this short time frame is that it allows for an assessment of whether the participant is experiencing symptoms of trauma currently.

These questions also ONLY apply to the participants' experiences in the last few weeks. It will be important for the interviewer to emphasize that the questions relate to how the participant is feeling CURRENTLY. Because the response patterns vary from question to question, it is important that the interviewer read the responses slowly and make sure that the participant understands what the responses mean.

FACE CARD

This is the end of the survey. The interviewer shows the participant a card, on which is one happy face and one sad face. The participant is asked to mark a sad face if they have experienced sexual violence, and the happy face if they have never experienced sexual violence. Once the participants have finished marking their card, it is put into a bag with other cards. The reason why the face card is given to participants is because it is thought that women who may not have disclosed sexual violence to the interviewer might be more willing to disclose experiences of sexual violence if they are sure that the information is anonymous. There is nothing on the card to indicate who the respondent is, and the bag of cards helps the participant to see that other women have answered this question. When the cards are analyzed against the data from the questionnaire, it allows comparison of the number of women who reported violence on the cards and the number of women who reported violence within the questionnaire.

NARRATIVE RESPONSE

This is intended to give both the interviewer and the participant an opportunity to mark anything else that was not captured in the questions, but has a direct relevance to the issue of violence against women. For example, the questionnaire does not ask directly whether girls are prohibited from going to school, but the participant may want to emphasize that this is a major form of violence against women and girls in her community. This section is also intended to provide the participant an opportunity to evaluate the interview, comment on the general condition of women in her community, or talk about how she felt during the interview process. All these comments should be recorded by the interviewer.

FINISH ONE AND FINISH TWO

These are methods by which the interviewers may complete the interview process, depending on whether the participant has experienced violence (and thus should be given a referral for assistance) or has not experienced violence (and thus should be given the option of taking referrals in case she knows someone who has experienced violence or she experiences violence in the future).

INTERVIEWER'S COMMENT

This section is for interviewers to write any notes related to the interview, that may include the interviewers' general impressions, or specific statements the participant made that elucidate the condition of women in their community.

INTRODUCTION

Purpose of the Tools

Program design, along with monitoring and evaluation (addressed in the next section), refers to the process of thinking that goes into a project before it begins, during redesign, or at any other point when you have an opportunity to assess whether the project is achieving its objectives and whether its effectiveness can be improved.¹ Design determines what results we want, based on an assessment of the needs and resources available, and what interventions are most likely to achieve them.

The tool recommended and provided in this manual for approaching program design is the Causal Pathway Framework. Tools that will assist you to identify and hire qualified staff for your GBV program in an appropriate manner are also provided. Given the sensitivity surrounding GBV programs, it is imperative that staff be respected and trusted individuals from the community. The principles guiding the planning and delivery of services in GBV programs include a belief in the dynamism of the local community and in the human potential for change; a global and multi-sectoral approach which is community-based, preventative, and focused on service quality; and a commitment to the respect of fundamental human rights.

Tools Included in this Chapter

- The Causal Pathway Framework
- Recruitment Do's and Don'ts
- Sample Job Descriptions
- Screening Tool
- Pre-hiring Interview Guide
- Rights and Responsibilities of GBV Program Beneficiaries and Employees
- Code of Conduct

Description of the Tools

The Causal Pathway Framework refers to the process of program design. This framework is 'causal' because it is based on the premise that the activities you carry out should logically cause desirable results to occur, and is 'pathway' because it is based on the idea that the causal links form a technically and programmatically sound logical progression.

The Recruitment Do's and Don'ts offer guidelines to consider when you are ready to launch the recruitment process for your GBV program.

The Sample Job Descriptions provide examples of the responsibilities and duties of GBV program staff as well as the qualifications to look for when hiring staff. Descriptions are available for the following positions: Program Coordinator, Advocacy Counselor, Animators/Community Trainers.

The Screening Tool provides a subjective evaluation of the level of knowledge of prospective staff concerning GBV issues and comfort in dealing with them. It can provide you with useful information on the skills of GBV program employees and help you to focus staff training on areas of particular need. In addition, you may use this tool to gather baseline data on the community's knowledge and awareness of GBV during your initial phase of advocacy and training.

The Pre-hiring Interview Guide is a useful tool for interviewing potential program employees. The tool includes scenarios which ask the interviewee to respond to difficult situations he/she may encounter on the job. His/her responses allow the program manager to see how the individual might perform when faced with uncomfortable situations.

All GBV programs should create and post in a visible area the Rights and Responsibilities of GBV Program Beneficiaries and Employees to highlight the rights of beneficiaries and the responsibilities of GBV staff. These guidelines outline the practices and daily conduct expected of program staff and volunteers vis-à-vis the beneficiaries, and the type of services that the beneficiaries may expect from the program. The guidelines reflect the fundamental values of GBV programs and a commitment to the specific communities where they are established.

The Code of Conduct should likewise be an obligatory part of any GBV program. This tool outlines the responsibility of staff not to engage in practices that may promote GBV, particularly sexual exploitation or abuse, among the beneficiary population. The code provides grounds for disciplinary action in response to infractions.

Introduction

As illustrated in the diagram below, the Causal Pathway Framework stipulates that although change in knowledge and attitudes of the target population (beneficiaries) are important steps in the process of preventing and responding to GBV, only a change in their behavior can lead to the desired impact of reduced incidents of GBV.

EFFECT → IMPACT

A causal pathway can be designed in five steps outlined below.

Step 1: Determining the Desired Impact

Impact refers to the change in the health status, social status, or economic status of the population of interest. In other words, revising existing health, social or economic problems is our ultimate goal or desired impact. To complete this first step of the causal pathway, three pieces of information need to be extracted from the needs and resources assessment:

1. the number of people in a population or vulnerable subgroup (for example, 5,000 minority women and children);
2. the area or sector of concern (for example, health, economic status, social status);
3. the indicators (for example, mortality data, educational attainment, poverty level).

Note: Indicators are the mode of measurement for assessing the effectiveness of a GBV program. Indicators allow you to measure specific outputs and effects of a program in order to make a detailed evaluation of the program's strengths and weaknesses. For a sample list of GBV indicators, see page 169.

Step 2: Determining the Effect Changes in the Population

This step starts with a question: "What has to happen that will cause the desired impact to occur?" The answer is: "Changes in the knowledge, attitudes, skills, intentions, and behaviors of the population that contribute to the desired impact." We use effect indicators to measure levels of these changes. Desired effects for GBV programs might include:

- ◆ Knowledge: The population should know...
 - ◆ Women and men have equal human rights according to international law.
 - ◆ Interpersonal violence is a violation of human rights.
 - ◆ Survivors know where to go for help.
- ◆ Attitudes: The population should believe that...
 - ◆ Women and men are equal.
 - ◆ Interpersonal violence is wrong and unacceptable in society.
 - ◆ Survivors of violence deserve assistance, not blame.
- ◆ Skills: The population should be able to...
 - ◆ Avert potential violence by recognizing risks and taking safe action.

¹² The IRC Causal Pathway Framework: A Guide to Program Design, Monitoring and Evaluation. International Rescue Committee, May 2001.

Behavior or Practices: The population should/could....

- ♦ Not commit acts of interpersonal violence.
- ♦ Support and assist survivors.
- ♦ Report incidents of GBV.
- ♦ Seek assistance (survivors).
- ♦ Condemn interpersonal violence.
- ♦ (Men) Assist other men to learn to live without using interpersonal violence.

Advantages of Effect Indicators:

- Allow for measurement of changes in the target population. (Changes in the target population is the primary aim of most GBV program activities.)

Disadvantages of Effect Indicators:

- Do not tell you if the population's status has changed (e.g., more women alive and functioning).
- Do not tell you what caused the change.
- Data can be challenging to obtain.

Step 3: Determining the Outputs

Once we have figured out what the population needs to know, agree with, and do differently before the desired impact can occur, we need to decide what we need to put in place to enable people to make those changes. Outputs are products and services that must be in place before the effects can occur. The best way to measure these products and services, as well as their quality, is through output indicators.

Advantages of Output Indicators:

- Directly related to activities.
- Allow for easy, quick and frequent measurements.
- Includes measures of quality of services.

Disadvantages of Output Indicators:

- Do not tell you if people change, only what the program does in terms of activities.
- Focusing on outputs can cause programs to lose sight of desired effects and long term impact.

Step 4: Determining the Major Activities

The next question we have to ask is, "What does the project have to do, and in what logical sequence, to produce these specific products and services in appropriate numbers and quality?" The technical and support tasks required to produce the outputs are referred to as activities, examples of which may include the following:

- Meet with community leaders and women's groups to begin awareness-raising and promote community leadership in GBV prevention and response;
- Develop assessment, supervision, training curricula and plan for GBV response among service providers (health, police, social services, judiciary, camp leaders/elders, etc.); and
- Ensure adequate logistics for supply of emergency contraception.

Step 5: Determining the Essential Inputs

In the Causal Pathway Framework, we begin the project design process by deciding where we want to end up, and we end by deciding what we need in terms of people, skills, money, equipment and supplies to achieve that impact. Inputs are resources required to support your activities.

The Design Direction

An essential feature of the Causal Pathway is the design direction, that is, the pathway starts by deciding on the impact and working backwards through effects, outputs, activities, and inputs

INPUTS → ACTIVITIES → OUTPUTS → EFFECTS → DESIRED IMPACT

← DESIGN DIRECTION

Once you have thought through the logical links in the Causal Pathway, you write the Causal Hypothesis, which in general looks as follows:

“This set of inputs and activities will result in these products and services (outputs), which will facilitate these changes in the population (effects), which will contribute to the desired impact.”

It's All in the Process!

Creating a causal pathway is a collaborative process. It is most useful to complete these steps with a group of experienced aid workers, including human resources, logistics and finance staff, and the project participants or beneficiaries. One person should play the role of facilitator. Encourage a relaxed atmosphere that promotes brainstorming, creativity and application of lessons learned. Then, using brightly colored markers and three sheets of flip chart paper on the wall, the group identifies (1) the problem and its causes; (2) the population of vulnerable subgroup and (3) working right to left, the desired impact, effects, outputs, activities and inputs. It may take several hours to refine a project pathway.

¹⁴ This chart was modified for IRC's purposes from a document prepared by CARE. (Barton, T. Guidelines to Monitoring and Evaluation: How Are We Doing? CARE Uganda and CARE USA. January 1997)

These recommendations assist in identifying issues and strategies related to hiring GBV staff.

- Recruitment and selection of GBV staff is a HIGHLY visible activity.
- This is the first time the community is learning about you, the GBV program, and observing how you work.
- One of the most important factors affecting the success of GBV programs is the trust of the community. Recruiting and selecting staff is your first opportunity to demonstrate your integrity, fairness, transparency, and general trustworthiness.

Do ensure that all community members have access to recruitment information and that all community members have the opportunity to apply for the position.

Do involve the leaders in gathering applications and helping get the word out.

Do provide clear written information in flyers summarizing the job and the qualifications needed, and method for application (e.g., written C.V., cover letter), location for delivering application, and deadline for submitting applications – translated into the community's language(s).

Do use a variety of methods for active outreach to find qualified candidates – especially targeting areas where women go.

- Some examples:
- Post many flyers around the community: schools, NGO offices, market areas, community centers, churches / mosques, skills training centers, etc.
 - Meet with leaders of the various groups and clubs in the camp, and give them copies of the flyer so they can inform their group.
 - Give copies of the flyers to implementing partners and other national programs so they can inform their staff.

Do not rely solely on local leaders or community announcements to find qualified candidates.

Do be prepared to receive many applications.

Do use objective measures for first screening applications (check for qualifications).

Do use objective measures for second screening of applicants (written test).

Do select a few individuals to serve on an interview panel, such as highly respected local leaders or staff members from related projects, national supervisors of related NGOs.

Do consider representation for all ethnic groups/languages among staff.

Do use consistent methods for interviews (interview questions same for all interviewees).

Do ask a few community members you know and trust to give you confidential feedback about candidates – only community members will know who is respected and who is not.

Do not select anyone until you check with other community members you know and trust.

Do post a list of those you select – in several locations around the camp – and give a list to the leaders -- so that everyone can know the results.

TITLE: Gender-based Violence (GBV) Program Coordinator

The GBV Program Coordinator manages and implements the GBV Program at field office and camp levels. The GBV Program is a multi-sectoral prevention and response program involving multiple organizations and actors from the refugee community, NGO and government implementing partners, UNHCR, other national and international organizations providing related services. The job duties include staff/volunteer management, training and sensitization, liaison and coordination with organizations working in the refugee setting, community mobilization with refugees, and overall program development, monitoring and evaluation. In the early phases of the program, the GBV Coordinator must work with technical resource people to develop a program implementation plan, tools, forms, formats, and guidelines for program development, implementation, and monitoring/ evaluation. The GBV Program coordinator must have experience, comfort and confidence in working with children and adults.

DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Staff and Volunteers

1. Draft job description for refugee staff and volunteers.
2. Recruit, hire, and supervise refugee staff and volunteers.
3. Develop training curriculum in collaboration with identified training organizations.
4. Arrange for staff and volunteer orientation, training, and refresher courses.
5. Develop and implement strategies for volunteer retention and recognition.

Community Mobilization

6. Using participatory methods, engage refugee leaders and other refugee groups and individuals in active participation with all phases of program planning, development, and implementation.
7. Organize and facilitate monthly camp level discussion and coordination meetings to build refugee capacity and strengthen community-based prevention and response to GBV.

Multi-Sectoral and Inter-Agency Program Development and Coordination

8. Establish close working relationships with NGOs, host government agencies, and UNHCR in the setting; meet regularly with individuals and groups from these organizations.
9. Organize and facilitate regular (monthly) coordination meetings with these organizations.
10. Lead the effort to develop a multi-sectoral and inter-agency prevention and response program to include referral and reporting mechanisms, information-sharing, coordination, and monitoring/evaluation. Establish written guidelines and procedures.
11. Working closely with partner organizations and training resources, facilitate and organize training workshops for skill building, sensitization, and capacity building of staff for appropriate response to GBV. Includes: health center, police, refugee officer, community services, UNHCR, and others.

Monitoring and Evaluation

12. Conduct Situation Analysis of GBV in the setting, using participatory methods: collect data and information from multiple sources including from among refugees, NGOs, host government and UN agencies.
13. Revise GBV Incident Report Form as needed for the setting. Train partner organizations and other sectors in use of this form.
14. Maintain awareness of all GBV cases reported in the setting through immediate review of Incident Report Forms, regular meetings with field staff/volunteers.
15. As needed for difficult or complex cases, provide direct advocacy and assistance.
16. Collect, compile, and analyze GBV report data monthly.
17. Collect and compile program activity information, evaluating progress toward achievement of program outcomes.
18. Develop monthly report formats that capture relevant information and that support the analysis and evaluation of program progress.

Administrative and Miscellaneous Duties

19. Maintain awareness of budget and expenditures in order to manage program within budget.
20. Write monthly work plans, monthly reports, and other reports as needed or requested.
21. Assist in writing program proposals.
22. Arrange for comprehensive and progressive gender-awareness training workshops with all staff of this organization.
23. Other duties as required.

DESIRED QUALIFICATIONS

1. University degree in social work or other social sciences, public health, community health or related field.
2. Awareness and knowledge of gender and/or gender-based violence; prior training in gender.
3. Knowledge of reproductive health issues.
4. Knowledge, skill, and experience in participatory methods for community development and mobilization.
5. Group facilitation skills and experience.
6. Counseling skills and experience.
7. Training skills; at least one year training experience.
8. One year of experience in program management in NGO preferred.
9. Experience working with refugees preferred.
10. Belief in and commitment to gender equality.
11. Diplomacy and assertiveness; the ability to confront and discuss sensitive issues with respect and care.

TITLE: GBV Advocacy Counselor

SUPERVISOR: GBV Program Coordinator

DUTIES & RESPONSIBILITIES:

The GBV Advocacy Counselor is a camp-based position, working to establish community-based systems and raise community awareness to prevent gender-based violence and to respond to any incidents in a timely, compassionate, and caring manner. The GBV Advocacy Counselor works in close collaboration with camp-based women's organizations, camp leadership, and community groups.

1. Counseling and assistance to survivors of sexual and gender violence.
2. Cooperation and coordination with camp authorities, host country authorities, and health care workers.
3. Work closely with women's organizations to establish programs for women in the camp.
4. Establish an advisory group (men and women) and work closely with them on program activities.
5. Conduct community education and awareness-raising activities.
6. Coordinate with staff of other NGOs and organizations working in the camp.
7. Write reports and maintain confidential records as required by this agency.

DESIRED QUALIFICATIONS:

1. Refugee woman, resident in the refugee setting.
2. Must be respected by the community, proven trustworthy and able to follow through with commitments.
3. Must be able to discuss sensitive subjects in an honest, open, effective, and respectful manner; in groups and with individuals.
4. Must possess interest and commitment to human rights and gender equality.
5. Must be fluent both in English and the language spoken by most refugees in the camp
6. Prefer ability to read and write in English; if not, must be able to read and write in mother tongue.
7. Prefer high school diploma.
8. Prefer previous work or volunteer experience in community development, counseling, reproductive health, community services or social services.

TITLE: GBV Animators / Community Trainers

DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES:

1. Perform two roles:
 - ◆ Trainers, to raise awareness about human rights, gender issues, gender violence, etc.
 - ◆ Information-gatherers/problem-identifiers and facilitators for solving identified problems.
2. Work in refugee camps and towns hosting high numbers of refugees.
3. Offer and provide training and facilitation with refugees, NGOs, and UN organizations.
4. Generally assigned to regions, working in pairs: one man, one woman. Regional assignment is based on languages spoken.
5. Assess community needs in relation to gender violence using the techniques of Participatory Rapid Appraisal. Use PRA and adult education techniques to assist communities in developing community-driven prevention and response plans.
6. Conduct education and sensitization activities in the refugee sites and with NGOs and UNHCR – for multiple purposes:
 - ◆ raise awareness and promote changes in attitudes and behavior re: gender, gender equality, power/abuse of power, and GBV.
 - ◆ to develop prevention strategies.
 - ◆ promote active community participation in prevention and response to GBV.
 - ◆ strengthen awareness of security/protection and gender issues for women and girls in NGO/UNHCR programs and services.
 - ◆ specifically target men and promote their involvement.
 - ◆ actively target youth/adolescents and promote their participation.
7. Target community education for different groups – men's groups, women's groups, refugee school teachers and PTAs, health educators and animators, adolescents, camp leaders, etc. Education will range from sensitization to specific gender violence topics to human rights, peace education, and conflict resolution.
8. Develop community education methods along with the community – may include workshops, drama, games, debates, poster contests, youth clubs, and other creative methods.
9. Monitor and evaluate community education, IEC (information, education, communication), awareness-raising, training, and other activities; revise strategies as needed based on results and outcomes.

DESIRED QUALIFICATIONS:

1. Prior training in at least one of the following: community development/ participation, PRA/RRA methods, Delta, community animation, social work, community health, public health
2. Prefer at least one year of experience in community development or animation program using participatory methods.
3. Refugee.
4. Must possess interest and commitment to human rights and gender equality.
5. Must be fluent both in English, and the primary refugee language, and at least one of the languages of ethnic groups (if they are different) in the refugee population.
6. Must be able to read and write in English.*
7. Prefer high school diploma.

* NOTE: This literacy requirement may make it difficult to recruit qualified women among refugee populations where the norm is to discourage girls from education. If this is the case, consider changing the program to accommodate illiterate staff. Using pictures and other visual aids, staff who do not read can indeed learn.

This Pre-Hiring Interview Guide gives the employer a chance to evaluate GBV knowledge of potential employees and as such can serve as a useful tool in making hiring decisions.

This interview aims to test your knowledge on issues of sexual and domestic violence. Please answer sincerely, as your answers will help us evaluate you. We wish you the best of luck. (Read information below to applicant and fill in accordingly.)

Family Name: _____ First Name: _____

Sex: F M

Date and place of birth: _____

Civil Status: Married Divorced Single Widowed

Profession/Occupation: _____

Nationality: _____

Desired Position: Community Educator Community Counselor

Date: _____

Preliminary Questions (Read aloud.)

1. Can you introduce yourself?
2. Describe your activities in the last year?
3. For what reason(s) have you applied for this job?
4. What qualities do you possess that will allow you to successfully execute the tasks related to the position?
5. What are your weak points?
6. How would you organize information sessions in your community?
7. What is, in your opinion, gender-based violence?
8. How would you approach and deal with (intervene with) a woman who experienced gender-based violence?
9. How would you approach and deal with (intervene with) a male perpetrator of gender-based violence?

¹⁶ Adapted from Maria Ciampi, International Rescue Committee GBV Program Manager in the Republic of Congo, 2001

Scenarios (Read aloud. Do not comment on applicant’s response during the interview.)

For the Prospective Community Counselors:

1. A woman consults you after being raped. The next day, the camp/village leader or chief calls you into his office and asks you for information about the woman. How will you answer him?
2. A man comes to see you and accuses you of having advised his wife to leave him. He wants to know where she is. What do you do?
3. A Community Educator sees you are busy with a case, but does not know the details of the situation. After you have finished dealing with the case, he asks you what happened. How will you answer him?

For Prospective Community Counselors and Educators:

4. A man confides in you, stating that he wants to kill his wife. What is your reaction?

For the Prospective Community Educators:

5. A woman comes to see you and reveals that she was raped the night before. What do you do?
6. You have planned an information session on the sexual harassment of students in school A Community Counselor asks you to modify your program. She wants to address, rather, the notion that victims of rape need compassion. What do you do?
7. During an information session, a community member interrupts the activity and says, ‘There are no problems of domestic abuse in our community. It is only since you have been here with your program that women are starting to complain. You want them to leave their families. You are disturbing us. Get out of here!’ What is your reaction?

Close the interview by thanking the candidate for his/her time and let him/her know when they should hope to hear from you by about the position.

RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF GBV PROGRAM BENEFICIARIES AND EMPLOYEES

INTRODUCTION

GBV staff members must hold themselves to the highest standards of professionalism in order to gain the trust of the community, and community members should be able to expect a standard of care that is commensurate with that level of professionalism.

Although the Rights and Responsibilities of GBV Program Beneficiaries and GBV Staff are imperative for GBV programs, they are also relevant to all humanitarian aid programs. GBV programs should provide a model to all other programs in utilizing these rights and responsibilities. The aim of Rights and Responsibilities of GBV Program Beneficiaries and Employees is to:

- ▶ Protect the beneficiaries of the program and the public in general.
- ▶ Establish expectations so that staff can manage, assess and improve their own work.
- ▶ Establish standards against which deliveries of services can be evaluated.
- ▶ Regulate the behavior of staff members to improve the quality of their work, and enhance their credibility and integrity.

Managers of GBV Programs should remit a copy of Rights and Responsibilities of GBV Program Beneficiaries and Employees to each program employee involved in carrying out activities against sexual and domestic violence, as well as collaborators and beneficiaries who request it.

Rights and Responsibilities of the Beneficiaries:

The term “beneficiary” refers to a person who has experienced sexual or domestic violence, and/or his or her family, or community members who make a request for services, information, orientation, referrals or psychosocial follow-up in the GBV program. This term is interchangeable with “client,” “service user,” “victim,” or “survivor of violence.”

Rights of Beneficiaries:

- Beneficiaries have a right to receive quality services.
- Beneficiaries have a right to receive services in their mother tongue, and the Program commits to addressing beneficiaries in a language they understand.
- Beneficiaries have a right to participate in the planning of the services they request.
- Beneficiaries have a right to be accompanied by a person of their choice when they receive information, undertake an action under the program or obtain other services.
- Beneficiaries have a right to expect confidentiality in their communications with Program staff, unless this jeopardizes their lives and the lives of others. Issues of confidentiality with children under the age of 18 will be based on their capacity to give informed consent.
- Beneficiaries have a right to lodge a complaint against an employee if a mistake was made in their case.
- Beneficiaries have the right, in every situation, to be treated with courtesy, equality, and understanding.
- Beneficiaries have the right, in their dealing with the GBV Program Staff, to relationships exempt from sexual harassment or any discrimination or pressure aimed at obtaining favors in exchange for services.

Responsibilities of Employees:

“Program staff” refers to any person who is employed or a volunteer in the context of the GBV Program, be it a program manager, assistant manager, community educator or community counselor, and carries out activities against sexual and domestic violence.

All persons working in the GBV Program must:

- Represent the GBV Program with honor and integrity in his/her contact with the beneficiaries.
- Provide beneficiaries with services that are humane and characterized by empathy, courtesy, respect and understanding.
- Help beneficiaries express their needs and adjust intervention plans to meet their specific needs.
- Answer beneficiaries’ questions and offer necessary information to help them understand and appreciate services rendered.
- Exercise absolute discretion and confidentiality in dealing with information obtained in the line of duty. Abstain from having conversations about the beneficiaries and must not reveal to anyone that an individual approached them with a request for services, unless the situation requires it.
- Take all the precautions necessary to respect the privacy of the beneficiaries if they have to provide any form of intimate care.
- Address the beneficiaries according to the usual norms, corresponding to the habits or traditions of the individual.
- Establish and maintain relationships with beneficiaries on a professional basis.
- Advise beneficiaries of conflict of interest that may come up.
- Do not solicit or accept tips, or additional money or gifts or favors from beneficiaries.
- Collaborate with all persons the client chooses to involve in the program aiming first and foremost for the betterment of the beneficiaries’ condition.

CODE OF CONDUCT

Introduction

Humanitarian agencies have a duty of care to beneficiaries and a responsibility to ensure that beneficiaries are treated with dignity and respect and that certain minimum standards of behavior are observed. In order to prevent sexual exploitation and abuse, the following core principles must be incorporated into humanitarian agency codes of conduct:¹⁸

- Sexual exploitation and abuse by humanitarian workers constitute acts of gross misconduct and are therefore grounds for termination of employment;
- Sexual activity with children (persons under the age of 18) is prohibited regardless of the age of majority or age of consent locally. Mistaken belief in the age of a child is not a defense;
- Exchange of money, employment, goods, or services for sex, including sexual favors or other forms of humiliating, degrading or exploitative behavior is prohibited. This includes exchange of assistance that is due to beneficiaries.
- Sexual relationships between humanitarian workers and beneficiaries are strongly discouraged since they are based on inherently unequal power dynamics. Such relationships undermine the credibility and integrity of humanitarian aid work.
- Where a humanitarian worker develops concerns or suspicions regarding sexual abuse or exploitation by a fellow worker, whether in the same agency or not, s/he must report such concerns via established agency reporting mechanisms.
- Humanitarian workers are obliged to create and maintain an environment which prevents sexual exploitation and abuse and promotes the implementation of their code of conduct. Managers at all levels have particular responsibilities to support and develop systems which maintain this environment.

To ensure the maximum effectiveness of the Code of Conduct, each GBV program director is required to post the Code of Conduct in clear view in the public areas of their offices. Examples of such areas include waiting areas and lobbies of field offices, NGO-run schools, and health clinics. In addition, the Code of Conduct is to be given to all employees and each employee shall be asked to acknowledge his or her receipt in writing. Please retain the originals of all acknowledgements in the appropriate employee files. All posted and distributed copies of the Code of Conduct should be translated to the appropriate language of use for the field area.

The sample Code of Conduct¹⁹ (see next page) may be modified to make it more effective or understandable in a particular culture or country. The Code must not, however, be modified in such a way as to weaken its effectiveness or diminish any of the core principles.

To: All staff

From: President or Director of Humanitarian NGO

Re: Code of Conduct for all Staff

In accordance with the mission and practice of [YOUR ORGANIZATION] and principles of international law and codes of conduct, all [YOUR ORGANIZATION] humanitarian staff, including both international and national, regular full and part time staff, interns, contractors, and volunteers, are responsible for promoting respect for fundamental human rights, social justice, human dignity, and respect for the equal rights of men, women, and children. While respecting the dignity and worth of every individual, the [YOUR ORGANIZATION] humanitarian worker will treat all persons equally without distinction whatsoever of race, gender, religion, color, national or ethnic origin, language, marital status, sexual orientation, age, socio-economic status, disability, political conviction, or any other distinguishing feature.

[YOUR ORGANIZATION] humanitarian workers recognize that certain international standards of behavior must be upheld and that they take precedence over local and national cultural practices. While respecting and adhering to these broader frameworks of behavior, [YOUR ORGANIZATION] specifically requires that [YOUR ORGANIZATION] humanitarian workers adhere to the following Code of Conduct.

Commitment to [YOUR ORGANIZATION] Code of Conduct

- (1) A [YOUR ORGANIZATION] humanitarian worker will always treat all persons with respect and courtesy in accordance with applicable international and national conventions and standards of behavior.
- (2) A [YOUR ORGANIZATION] humanitarian worker will never commit any act that could result in physical, sexual or psychological harm to the beneficiaries we serve.
- (3) A [YOUR ORGANIZATION] humanitarian worker will not condone or participate in corrupt activities or illegal activities.
- (4) [YOUR ORGANIZATION] and [YOUR ORGANIZATION] humanitarian workers recognize the inherent unequal power dynamic and the resulting potential for exploitation inherent in humanitarian aid work, and that such exploitation undermines the credibility of humanitarian work and severely damages victims of these exploitive acts and their families and communities. For this reason, [YOUR ORGANIZATION] humanitarian workers are prohibited from engaging in sexual relationships with beneficiaries. Sexual activity with children (persons under the age of 18) is strictly prohibited.
- (5) A [YOUR ORGANIZATION] humanitarian worker must never abuse his or her power or position in the delivery of humanitarian assistance, neither through withholding assistance nor by giving preferential treatment including requests/ demands for sexual favors or acts.
- (6) It is expected of all [YOUR ORGANIZATION] humanitarian workers to uphold the highest ethical standard of integrity, accountability and transparency in the delivery of goods and services while executing the responsibilities of their position.
- (7) A [YOUR ORGANIZATION] humanitarian worker has the responsibility to report any known or suspected cases of alleged misconduct against beneficiaries to senior management (as outlined in the reporting pathway) immediately. Strict confidentiality must be maintained to protect all individuals involved.

¹⁸ NOTE different considerations will arise regarding the enforcement of some of these principals for humanitarian workers hired from the beneficiary community. While sexual exploitation and abuse and the misuse of humanitarian assistance will always be prohibited, discretion may be used in the application of the principals regarding sexual relationship for this category of humanitarian worker.

I, the undersigned, hereby declare that I have read and understand this Code of Conduct. I commit myself to exercise my duties as an employee of the Gender Based Violence Program in accordance with the Code of Conduct. I understand that if I do not conform to the Code of Conduct, I may face disciplinary sanctions.

INTRODUCTION

Purpose of the Tools

Monitoring and evaluation is the process of collecting and analyzing information about the project that tells you whether you are on track to reach your objectives, and whether or not the project achieved or contributed to the desired impact.²⁰ In order to know whether or not you are on track to achieving your program's objectives, you must monitor the project during implementation as well as evaluate its impact at the end of the project. Monitoring the progress of the project allows you to adapt the program as needed to ensure that you attain your objectives. It is necessary to plan for monitoring and evaluation when you design your program; this will help you both to design an effective program and ensure that you plan (and budget) for appropriate M&E activities.

Monitoring GBV incident data frequently and regularly will enable you to continuously assess changes in prevalence and types of GBV in your setting. By gathering and reviewing this information, you will be able to evaluate your program's effectiveness and develop a better program that responds to specific needs and circumstances in your target community as they change over time.

The process of monitoring and evaluation generally helps you answer the following questions:

- Are we doing what we said we were going to do?
- Are we achieving what we said we would achieve?
- Is the project design sound? How can it be improved?
- What were the unintended consequences?
- Is our program causing the observed changes?

Or, in the Causal Pathway Framework language:

- Inputs: Were program inputs available, adequate, timely?
- Activities: Were activities performed on schedule?
- Outputs: Were outputs produced? Were they of acceptable quality?
- Effect: Were effects observed?
- Impact: Was impact achieved?

For GBV programs, measuring outputs and effects, i.e. using Output and Effect Indicators have proven most useful. Impact of GBV programs is observed only after some years of programming.

Tools Included in this Chapter

- Sample Output and Effect Indicators
- Incident Report Form/Consent for Release of Information
- Monthly Statistical Report Form
- Client Feedback Form

Description of the Tools

The samples of Output and Effect Indicators (defined in the Program Design section) can be useful in GBV program monitoring and evaluation. Following a multi-sectoral framework, it is recommended that programs establish at least one indicator for response in each sector (health, psych-social, security, legal/justice), at least one indicator about coordination, and at least one indicator related to prevention. You may also choose to establish activity indicators to measure your activities. Activity monitoring (in addition to output and effect monitoring) may be required by some donors.

The incident report form will enable you to collect and organize data about individual incidents of GBV using a consistent method that will facilitate better information sharing and storage. Information release authorization form must be used to secure consent from individuals whose information you will be disclosing to other organizations or individuals. It is the responsibility of the GBV staff to maintain beneficiaries' confidentiality (please refer back to the Rights and Responsibilities of GBV Program Beneficiaries and Employees, pp. 159 of this manual).

The monthly report form enables the monthly compilation of GBV data in your setting. The form should be completed every month in order for the information it provides to be reliable and helpful. Regularly filling out the monthly statistical report will enable you to compare data about GBV over a series of months, identify trends, monitor long-term and short-term changes, and spot consistent issues or problems in your setting.

The client feedback form will help you compile data from beneficiaries of GBV programs. This will give you important information on what beneficiaries believe are the strengths and weaknesses of your program, especially in terms of service delivery.

Some of the tools include additional introductory information and instructions. Read and follow these carefully. It should be remembered that monitoring and evaluation is a process that begins with well-considered objectives and clear and specific intended outcomes. Ongoing monitoring and evaluation includes consistent data collection and review.

SAMPLE INDICATORS FOR MEASURING EFFECTS AND OUTPUTS OF GBV PROGRAMS

These sample output and effect indicators are useful tools in monitoring and evaluation of GBV programs.

Note: The “/” symbol is used to indicate “Divided By”

Name of indicator	Type of indicator	Definition of Sample Indicator
Health staff training tools	Output	GBV training curriculum for health care staff developed and in use.
Health staff qualifications/ training	Output	Calculate: Number of health care staff successfully completed GBV training / Total number of health care staff (all levels)
Active screening for GBV	Effect	Calculate: Number of GBV reports identified by active screening at health center / Number of GBV reports
Timely and appropriate post rape care	Effect	Calculate: Number of reported rape survivors receiving basic set of health services within 3 days of incident / Number of reported rape incidents

Psycho-Social: Individual and Community

Name of indicator	Type of indicator	Definition of Sample Indicator
Gender balance in community mobilization	Output	Number of men's groups engaged in GBV awareness raising and prevention (Note: If using this indicator, need to clearly define the characteristics of groups)
Gender equity in decision-making	Effect	Number of refugee governing bodies that include equal numbers of men and women.
Level of community awareness	Effect	Calculate: Number of women members of refugee governing bodies who state women's opinions are influential in group decisions / Number of women members of refugee governing bodies
Increase in GBV report rate	Effect	Increase in timely post rape care (calculation above in Health Services)
GBV and human rights awareness raising	Output	GBV and Human Rights training curriculum developed and in use
GBV and human rights awareness raising	Output	Calculate: Number [Refugees, NGO Staff, UNHCR Staff, Police, etc.] successfully completed Human Rights Training / Total Number of [Refugees, NGO Staff, etc.]
Survivors/women at risk engaged in reintegration and/or empowerment activities	Output	Calculate: Number of Survivors successfully completed vocational training courses or income generation projects / Total number of survivors identified Calculate: Number of women at high risk for GBV successfully completed vocational training courses or income generation projects / Total number of women at high risk for GBV identified[Note: If using this indicator, need to clearly specify "high risk"]

Police and Security Systems

Name of indicator	Type of indicator	Definition of Sample Indicator
Security system	Output	Number of police present per 10,000 population
Police training and capacity building tools	Output	GBV training curriculum for police developed and in use.
Police trained in GBV procedures	Output	Number of guidelines distributed to police officers and commanders.
Police trained in GBV procedures	Output	Calculate: Number of police successfully completed GBV training / Total number of police (all levels)
Gender-balanced security forces	Output	Calculate: Number female camp-based security workers / Number camp-based security workers
Output	Output	Calculate: Number female police officers / Number police officers
Police interview procedures	Effect	Calculate: Number of police posts with private interview space in use for GBV cases / Total number of police posts
Community awareness raising AND Police training	Effect	Calculate: Number of GBV related assault cases reported to police / Total number GBV assault reports

Criminal Justice System

Name of indicator	Type of indicator	Definition of Sample Indicator
Proportion of cases filed in court	Effect	Number of GBV cases filed in court / Number of GBV cases reported to police
Case outcomes	Effect	Calculate: Number of GBV cases with Acquittal or Conviction within X months of the date charges are filed / Total number GBV cases filed in court

Coordination

Name of indicator	Type of indicator	Definition of Sample Indicator
Multi-sectoral approach	Output	Multi-sectoral and inter-agency procedures, practices, and reporting forms established in writing and agreed by all actors.
Output	Output	Number of organizations involved in developing those guides.
Output	Output	Number of written procedures distributed for multi-sectoral referral and coordination.
Output	Output	Number of inter-sectoral coordination meetings held.
Coordination	Output	Number of contributing factors identified in coordination meetings through trend analysis of GBV reports.
Output	Output	Number of inter-sectoral strategies developed to address identified contributing factors.

Introduction

The Incident Report Form is recommended for use by actors engaged in prevention and response to gender-based violence in refugee settings. The Incident Report Form is an inter-agency tool and was designed for the following purposes:

- ♦ To provide a comprehensive summary of the most relevant information about an individual incident.
- ♦ As an information sharing tool, to be copied and shared (with survivor consent) among and between actors or organisations involved in assisting the survivor and/or taking follow up action.
- ♦ As a method for preventing the survivor from repeating the story and answering the same questions during multiple interviews.
- ♦ As a tool for collecting the most basic and relevant data, for use in monitoring and evaluation GBV incidents and GBV programming.
- ♦ As a means of collecting consistent data in all settings, to enable world-wide comparison of GBV data across programs, settings, countries, and regions.

The Incident Report Form is not an interview guide. Staff who interview survivors must be properly trained in skills for interviewing, active listening, and emotional support necessary for working with survivors. Separate forms may be needed for interview guides and note taking. It is important to remember that a survivor may be emotionally traumatized. Therefore, great care must be taken to interview with compassion and respect. It may be appropriate to complete the form outside of the presence of the survivor.

Mechanisms and procedures for reporting, referral, and co-ordination should be established during the design stage of GBV programming. Meet with organizations and individuals in your setting to determine each group's information needs and how best to use the completed Incident Report Forms.

In most settings, the following procedures are useful:

- ♦ One organization or group is designated as the "lead agency" for maintaining all report data, receiving the majority of reports, and providing immediate assistance. Often, this is either the UNHCR Community Services staff specializing in GBV, or a health care facility's reproductive health center, or a refugee women's organization.
- ♦ Original completed Incident Report Forms are maintained in the lead agency's offices in locked files.
- ♦ With Survivor consent to share information: Lead agency gives copies of the completed Incident Report Form, within 24 hours, to organizations most in need of this information; such as UNHCR Protection, health facility, and the designated community services agency. Others, such as police, may also receive copies, depending on Survivor's choices.
- ♦ Without Survivor consent to share information: In a camp setting, the lead agency provides information to UNHCR Protection within 24 hours; however, the incident report MUST NOT include any information identifying the Survivor. UNHCR needs this information in order to perform their protection mandate. In a non-camp setting, participating agencies should determine the methods for sharing NON-IDENTIFYING information in cases where a Survivor does not provide consent, so to protect the anonymity of Survivors but also satisfy the goal of collecting data on GBV cases.

INCIDENT TYPE:

Use consistent words/definitions to enable proper data collection, tracking of incident data, monitoring and evaluation.

The following types of GBV are recommended to characterize incident type. You will need to discuss with your GBV stakeholder/inter-agency team and add any types/definitions of GBV that are occurring in your setting and not included on this list. (These are the same as those listed on page 69 of this manual.)

Rape/Attempted Rape

An act of non-consenting sexual intercourse (penis-vagina or penis-anus). Any penetration is considered rape; efforts to rape someone which do not result in penetration are considered attempted rape. Consent by a minor must be evaluated against international standards in which those under the age of 18 are legally considered unable to provide informed consent. Rape/attempted rape may include:

- rape of an adult female;
- rape of a minor (male or female), including incest;
- gang rape, if there is more than one assailant;
- marital rape, between husband and wife; or
- male rape, sometimes known as sodomy.

Sexual Abuse

Other non-consenting sexual acts, not including rape or attempted rape. Sexual abuse includes acts performed on a minor. As above, even if the child has given consent, sexual activity with a minor may indicate sexual abuse because she/he is considered unable to give informed consent. Examples of sexual abuse are:

- insertion of foreign objects into the genitals;
- forced removal of clothing;
- forcing someone to engage in sexual acts; or
- forcing someone to watch sexual acts.

Sexual Exploitation

Sexual exploitation includes sexual coercion and manipulation by a person in a position of power who uses that power to engage in sexual acts with a person who does not have power. The exploitation may involve the provision of assistance in exchange for sexual acts. In these situations, the survivor may believe that she/he has no other option than to comply (perhaps to protect her family, to receive goods or services, etc.), so that even if consent is given, it is manipulated or coerced. Examples include:

- humanitarian worker requiring sex in exchange for material assistance, favors, or privileges;
- teacher requiring sex in exchange for passing grade or admission to class;
- refugee leader requiring sex in exchange for favors or privileges; or
- soldier or security worker requiring sex in exchange for safe passage.

Forced Early Marriage

This occurs when parents or others arrange for and force a minor to marry someone. Force may occur by exerting pressure or by ordering a minor to get married, and may be for dowry-related or other reasons. Forced marriage is a form of GBV because the minor is not allowed to, or is not old enough to make an informed choice.

Domestic Violence: Intimate Partner or Other Family Members

Domestic violence takes place between intimate partners (spouses, boyfriend/girlfriend) as well as between family members (for example, mothers-in-law and daughters-in-law). Domestic violence may include sexual, physical, and psychological abuse. In any reference to domestic violence, it is important to be clear whether the violence is perpetrated by an intimate partner or another family member. Other terms used to refer to domestic violence perpetrated by an intimate partner include 'spousal abuse' and 'wife battering.'

Examples include:

- Slapping, hitting, beating, kicking, use of weapons;
- Verbal and emotional abuse, including public humiliation, forced isolation;
- Murder or threats to life;
- Spouse's control and deprivation of his/her partner's access to food, water, shelter, clothing, health care, fertility (forced pregnancies and/or abortions);
- Wife is beaten or abused for not performing her duties according to husband's expectations (refuses sex, food is late to be prepared, etc.); or
- A woman is beaten by her mother-in-law because of the woman's subordinate status in the household.

Trafficking for Sex or Labor

Trafficking, as defined by the International Organization of Migration (IOM), occurs when "a migrant is illicitly engaged (recruited, kidnapped, sold, etc.) and/or moved either within or across borders...Intermediaries (traffickers) during any part of this process obtain economic or other profit by means of deception, coercion and or other forms of exploitation under conditions that violate fundamental human rights of migrants."²¹ Women and girls are at primary risk of trafficking, in the form of trafficking for domestic work, forced prostitution, forced marriage, etc.

Female Genital Cutting (FGC)

FGC entails cutting of healthy female genital tissue, usually as part of a traditional ceremony that symbolizes rite of passage for the victim. Adult women and girls may consent to FGC due to social and cultural pressure, or may be physically forced. Minors are often physically forced; even if not, they are considered unable to give informed consent due to their age. FGC is also referred to as Female "Circumcision" and Female Genital Mutilation.

Other Gender-based Violence

This includes physical, mental or social abuse that is directed against a person because of his or her gender role in a society or culture. Examples include:

- A girl is not allowed to go to school because of gender role expectations in the family (housekeeping, cooking, care of children, etc.);
- A girl or woman is required to marry against her will according to local custom; or
- A woman or girl is prevented from freely walking around in her own community because of cultural practices that require women to be accompanied by a male when in public.

Non-Gender-based Violence Cases

Some cases come to GBV workers which are not representative of GBV. These should not be categorized as GBV cases, but they might be counted separately when describing the program's actions and activities in reports, particularly for the area of prevention. Examples include:

- ♦ Child abuse (physical or psychological abuse that is not gender-based);
- ♦ Domestic arguments and problems that are not reflective of gender inequities; e.g., children with behavior problems
- ♦ General health problems.

SECONDARY INCIDENT TYPES

Use this space only if there is more than one type of gender-based violence that occurs during one incident.

Example: Rape and forced marriage.

Incident Type - Rape.

Secondary Incident Type - Forced Marriage

CASE NUMBER

If you choose, assign the Survivor a case number or incident number. This is often useful for confidentiality; the incident is referenced by number rather than by Survivor's name. Is also useful in situations where one Survivor suffers repeated incidents. In a separate notebook, incident numbers are cross-referenced with Survivor names; to ensure confidentiality, this is maintained separately, but also in a locked file, from Incident Report Forms.

CAMP (If Appropriate)

Name of the refugee camp where the Survivor lives.

DATE AND TIME OF INTERVIEW

Date and time of day that you first interview the Survivor and take the report.

PREVIOUS INCIDENT NUMBERS FOR THIS CLIENT (if any)

If this client has been seen before, and if you use NGO Incident Numbers, note any prior incident numbers assigned in the past. If you don't know the numbers assigned, try to list month/year of previous incidents, or somehow indicate that this client has been before for other incident(s).

SURVIVOR INFORMATION

NOTE: In settings where confidentiality of these forms cannot be assured, it is recommended that you do NOT include survivor name, full address, and other identifying information on this form. Instead, use NGO Incident Number (see above).

Name	Full name of survivor
Age	Age at present time
Yr of Birth	What year Survivor was born
Sex	F for Female; M for Male
Address	Full address in camp, including Village/Block, Street, Plot/House, etc.
Tribe	Tribal or ethnic affiliation, if any. If unknown, write "unknown"
Marital Status	Single, Married, Divorced, Separated, Widowed, or Spouse Location Unknown
Occupation	If he/she is employed, write occupation. If not employed, write "None."
No. of Children	How many children live with her/him?
Ages [of children]	List ages of children living with Survivor (Example: 6 months, 2 yrs, 8 yrs)
Head of family	List name of head of family and relation to Survivor. If Survivor, write "Survivor". In a refugee setting, head of family usually means the person in the household who is listed as head of family with UNHCR, for food distribution, and/or with the host country registration system. You may need to discuss this definition and clarify for your setting.

UNHCR “Vulnerable” designation (if any)

In a refugee setting, if Survivor is designated as a “vulnerable” individual according to UNHCR, list those vulnerabilities. (Example: UAM, or Disabled, or Elderly). In a non-refugee setting, discuss and clarify categories of vulnerability.

Ration Card No. or ID Card No.

In a refugee setting, if she/he has a ration card and/or ID card with her/him and in her/his name, write the number(s). If not, write “unknown”. If she/he does not have these cards at all, write “No card”.

If Survivor is a minor child

If the Survivor is under age 18, fill these lines:

Name of Caregiver - Name of person acting as parent.

Relation - Specify the family member: Mother, Father, Sister, Aunt, etc. If not living with her own family but is living with a caretaker family, write “Foster Family”.

THE INCIDENT

Location

Be specific, using addresses or other common identifiers.

Examples for a refugee setting where addresses may not be available:

- On path to Mtendeli Camp
- 20 minutes outside camp near main road entrance
- In camp, Village B
- In camp, near Spanla Bar
- Behind latrines, C2, 23
- Outside Bamba Bar in town

Date Date the incident occurred

Day Day the incident occurred (i.e., Mon, Tues, Wed, Thurs, Fri, Sat, Sun)

Time Time the incident occurred. Use 24 hour time or specify AM or PM.

Description of Incident

Summarize the Survivor’s story of what occurred, what were the circumstances leading up to the attack, what happened during the attack, what did she/he do afterwards, what did the perpetrator do afterwards. Be complete in this description – but remember this is a summary. Use additional paper if you need more space.

Present Day After-Effects

Mark an X for any that apply.

It is important that the interviewer have training and skill in interviewing Survivors. This section is only a brief summary to give a general description of the Survivor’s present day emotional/psychological functioning. In most cases, you will NOT ask all of these questions directly. If you have received counsellor training, you will be able to make this assessment and ask only relevant questions when it is appropriate to do so. If you have NOT received counsellor training, leave this section blank.

PERPETRATOR INFORMATION

Fill in all spaces, as listed on the form, with information about the alleged perpetrator. Complete this section similar to Survivor section above. Be as complete as possible.

WITNESSES

Describe presence of any witnesses

Describe in detail: people walking nearby, someone heard but not seen, someone watching, anyone who heard or saw anything.

Names and Addresses [of witnesses]

ACTION TAKEN

Use this section to list any action taken by you or by Survivor or anyone as of the time you are filling this form. Be specific with names, dates, and action taken as listed on the form.

MORE ACTION NEEDED AND PLANNED ACTION

Danger Assessment & Immediate Safety Plan

This section is essential if Survivor lives with or near the alleged perpetrator, and if the perpetrator is still at large. Be specific about potential continuing danger and Survivor’s plan for safety.

Be specific of what action you will take, what action the Survivor plans, and what other action you think is needed by anyone.

NOTE: Page 3 is optional. In some settings, it is useful to have this medical summary attached to the Incident Report Form. In other settings, health staff find this form redundant and therefore unnecessary. If the Survivor chooses to report the case to the police, there may be a medical evidence form required by law in your setting; in these situations, completing Page 3 of this form is probably unnecessary. You will need to discuss this with your stakeholder/inter-agency team and determine when/how to use Page 3 of this Incident Report Form.

Complete the top section: Survivor Name, Yr of Birth, Sex.

- ♦ If Survivor does not want or need to have a medical examination, explain the reasons why. In this case, the remainder of page 3 should be blank. NOTE: In some cases, such as Sexual Harassment, where there was no physical contact and there are no injuries, medical examination may not be necessary if the Survivor does not wish to go to the Health Center and does not wish to press charges with the Police.
- ♦ If the Survivor has already been seen at the Health Center, ask Survivor for consent (see instructions for Page 4, Consent) and take this form to the health worker and have him/her complete it and sign it.

- ♦ If the Survivor needs medical examination and has not been to the Health Centre yet, escort her there and give the form to the health worker for completion.

For the health care worker completing the form:

Date of Exam The date Survivor is/was examined related to this incident

Time Time of examination related to this incident

Name of IPD/OPD Name of in- or out-patient facility where exam is conducted

Summary of Medical Treatment Given

Complete this section ONLY if Survivor gives consent for sharing such information (see instructions for Page 4, Consent). Include a brief summary of treatment given. Details of this information will be on the health facility forms, to be kept at the health facility.

Medical Follow-Up Recommended

Mark appropriate boxes with an X

Additional Comments

Use this space if there are any specific recommendations or comments the health worker deems necessary

Print name of person conducting examination

Print title of person conducting examination

Signature of person conducting examination

In most refugee settings, incident data should be shared between health care, community services, and UNHCR protection staff. In non-refugee settings, the sharing of information should be determined by the agencies engaged in providing GBV-related services. Before sharing any information, however, there must be survivor consent. The form on Page 4 is recommended.

Read the entire form to Survivor and mark with an X all organizations to be included. If she is able to sign, obtain signature. If not, obtain thumb print and witness signature.

Information must be protected in accordance with Survivor's wishes, respecting any restrictions she chooses.

If Survivor does not consent to information sharing, then only non-identifying incident information can be released to others.

SAMPLE INCIDENT REPORT FORM FOR REFUGEE SETTING

NOTE: In adjusting this form for non-refugee settings, efforts should be made minimize changes, so to ensure consistency in data collection in all humanitarian contexts.

INCIDENT REPORT FORM

CONFIDENTIAL

Instructions

- Form to be completed by fully trained and designated staff
- Original to be maintained in designated agency (outside camp)
- Copy to be delivered to UNHCR Protection Officer, in sealed envelope, as soon as possible. (If survivor wishes to report incident to police, Protection Officer must have copy within 24 hours.)
- Attach additional pages with continued narrative, if needed.

NOTE This form is NOT an interview guide. Staff must be properly trained in interviewing survivors. Separate forms are available for counseling and health exam/treatment.

MONTHLY STATISTICAL REPORTS

Introduction

One essential element for monitoring and evaluation is compiling and analyzing information about the types of GBV occurring in the setting. Some of this information is easily available in completed Incident Reports. Much of this information, however, goes unreported, and must be obtained from other sources such as focus groups and other discussions with the refugee population and with other organizations working with refugees. These discussions should be part of your ongoing program activities.

Monthly Report

You and other key stakeholders in your setting will determine how information is to be gathered and reported each month, including who is responsible for this. Monthly reports are shared and discussed with key stakeholders, as agreed. These monthly reports provide the basis for guiding your ongoing planning and development of GBV prevention and response activities.

The sample GBV Monthly Statistical Report included in this section is for use in camp settings. Each refugee setting may generate more than one report, depending on how many refugee camps are being served. It is advisable to have individual camp reports and also one report for the country that compiles data from all camps into one report.

The sample GBV Monthly Statistical Report may be revised for non-camp settings so that the same basic statistical data is collected. It is important, in this case, to ensure that different agencies do not report on the same incident, so that the compiled reports can generate accurate numbers of incidents. Strategies to reduce over-reporting should be part of the design of data collection, with a lead agency designated to review reports for accuracy.

The statistical report format includes the minimum recommended information to be compiled and reported each month for the purpose of monitoring and evaluating program outcomes. It contains:

- * Incident Report totals and report rate calculations
- * Other information about GBV incidents (GBV occurring but not reported)
- * Description and analysis of issues, contributing factors, and specific problems needing preventive action
- * Status/measurement report of your established program indicators

Depending on your situation and country plan, you may wish to add more information to your monthly report.

Reporting Rate based on Population Size

A key piece of data is the GBV Report Rate for that month. Calculating the reporting rate, and not just counting numbers of reports, will allow you to compare rates across time and across settings in your country. The reporting rate takes into consideration the population, and gives a more meaningful number for comparison than simply the numbers of reports.

Calculate the "GBV report rate" for the month

- a. _____ = Number of GBV cases reported during the month
- b. _____ = Total population in the setting during the month
- c. $a / b \times 10,000$ = GBV reports per 10,000 population during the month

This calculation will give you the report rate for all types of GBV. It is important to repeat this calculation for each type of GBV seen in your setting: In-Camp Rape report rate, Out-of-camp Rape report rate, Attempted Rape report rate, Domestic Violence report rate, etc.

Incident Detail Information

As part of your monitoring and evaluation plan, you will need to allow time for systematic and continuous compiling of incident details. The following pages include worksheets that, if used consistently, can provide detailed information for data analysis without needing a lot of time or extensive computer programs.

Most GBV initiatives in humanitarian settings are addressing several different types of GBV. Each different type of GBV has its own unique characteristics, contributing and risk factors, as well as specific outcomes and after-effects. It is therefore necessary to compile and review different sets of information for each of the different types of GBV in your setting. These unique sets of information will provide the guidance you need for ongoing program planning and development.

The worksheets, as attachments to the monthly camp/setting report, contain recommended data elements for developing an understanding of each type of GBV. We recommend that you review the worksheets provided, revise as appropriate, and add additional worksheets for other types of GBV that occur in your setting.

SAMPLE MONTHLY STATISTICAL REPORT

Country _____ Camp/Location _____

Month _____ Year _____ Camp population this month _____

INCIDENTS REPORTED THIS MONTH

TYPE OF INCIDENT REPORTED	NUMBER OF REPORTS THIS MONTH – INCIDENT OCCURRED THIS MONTH	NUMBER OF REPORTS THIS MONTH – INCIDENT OCCURRED PRIOR TO THIS MONTH	REPORT RATE PER 10000 POPULATION*
Rape (in/near/around camp)
Rape (during flight in home or host country; before arrival in camp)
Attempted Rape
Sexual Abuse/Assault
Sexual Exploitation
Forced Marriage and/or Attempted
Domestic Violence (intimate partner)
Domestic Violence (other family member)
FGC and/or Attempted
Other GBV
TOTAL ALL GBV INCIDENTS REPORTED

* CALCULATING THE REPORT RATE PER 10000 POPULATION: for each month, for each type of GBV, calculate:

- _____ = number of incidents reported during month
- _____ = total population of camp during month
- a / b X 10000 = Incident reports per 10000 population during the month

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION ABOUT GBV THIS MONTH

This section will provide a broader description of the types, extent, causes, outcomes, and analysis of GBV than the sample monthly statistical report will allow.

Briefly describe additional relevant information about GBV this month. This could include the following:

- ◆ Types/extent of GBV occurring that are not reported and counted as “incidents”:
- information gathered through camp visits, observations, focus groups, committee meetings, school visits, section/block leaders, and other interactions with the refugee population—with women, men, youth, children
- anonymous reports from other organizations (reports they received but have no consent to share identifying information)
- information gathered through coordination meetings and discussions with other NGOs, UN agencies, police, security workers, etc.
- ◆ Information about case outcomes that are important or unusual, or especially difficult or famous cases. Might include decisions by traditional courts or national courts, police action, UNHCR action, actions taken by refugee men’s groups, etc.

GBV INDICATORS

In this section, list the main indicators you are using in each of the sector/functional areas and indicate this month’s measurement for each and the year-to-date total. For year-to-date, indicate the month/year for start of the year you are measuring.

SAMPLE INCIDENT DATA WORKSHEETS

Good quality GBV prevention and response requires monitoring and analyzing details of incident reports. This includes details about each incident, demographic information about survivors and perpetrators, response action, and case outcomes.

For the different types of GBV, there are varying situational factors, survivor needs, response actions, and opportunities for prevention planning. Therefore, there are different information needs for the different types of GBV occurring in your setting. Collecting, compiling, and analyzing this information will increase your understanding of any trends and patterns, which should guide you in ongoing program planning and development.

The following pages contain suggestions for specific data elements to collect for reported incidents of:

- * Rape
- * Forced Marriage
- * Domestic Violence (intimate partner abuse)

For other types of GBV in your setting, you will need to develop your own data sheets, based on those provided here.

Instructions

In each camp/setting, there must be one office where all incident reports are compiled. As always, these records must be locked to ensure confidentiality.

Each time there is an incident reported, someone will complete an Incident Report Form and it will be forwarded to the UNHCR protection officer responsible for compiling and keeping Incident Report Forms.

Each month, there is a new set of data sheets for each type of GBV in your setting. One data sheet is used for all incidents of that type reported in the month. When an Incident Report Form comes in, the person should review it and complete the relevant data sheet. This involves putting a “tick” mark in the “Numbers” column. This same process is repeated with each Incident Report Form during the month.

At the end of the month, count the tick marks in each row, and give a number for the total.

These compiled data sheets should be attached to the monthly GBV report for the setting and distributed to members of the coordination team at camp level and field office level. This provides essential information for understanding the nature and extent and any patterns or trends in GBV so that you can effectively plan both response and prevention actions.

NOTE: If there is only one reported case of any type in the month, you must be especially careful to protect confidentiality for that survivor. Consider whether it is appropriate to list all the data elements about that case; perhaps you should give general information about case details.

See pages 192-194 for an example of a completed 3-page Rape data sheet for a month.
